BRITAIN WEIGHS DUTIES RISE AS FRANCE CHAFES

100 Per Cent Tariff on Fruits and Vegetables Debated in Commons.

CRISIS DESCRIBED AS WAR BY PARIS PAPER

Franco-Belgian Economic Union Hinted as Hymans Confers in London.

London, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The House of Commons tonight debated 100 per cent import duties on early vegetables and fruits while growls of an agitated and angry Europe were borne to the legislators from across the Channel and the North Sea.

Harassed by demands from a large section of its conservative supporters for higher tariffs, the government has had to face recriminations, formal or informal, in respect of those already existing from France, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Scandinavia, Spain and Portugal.

The French protest has been the loudest and the knowledge that Anglo-French friendship was passing through a severe trial has done nothing to make the government feel happier.

The British official view is that France has nothing to complain about.

When French currency virtually collapsed several years ago, Great Britain took no protective measures to prevent France from getting full benefit from the depreciated franc in the export market.

Following the fall of the pound from the gold standard, however, France clamped a 15 per cent surtax on British imports, and this has dealt the British coal industry in particular a staggering blow.

From the point of view of fair play, British government officials say the weight of the argument is all on their side even after the imposition of recent British duties, and they declare themselves unable to understand French talk on "reprisals."

Anglo-French trade discussions, which were to have opened today in London, were postponed and it was freely admitted that the atmosphere was distinctly disturbing.

Economic Union Plan.

Foreign Minister Hymans arrived hotfoot from Brussels last night and today engaged in conversations with Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, and others.

It was believed M. Hymans had a card up his sleeve which might or might not prove to be a trump. This was said to be a plan for Franco-Belgian economic union, on the lines of the defunct Austro-German pact, which might be extended to include Holland.

France was generally credited here with being the originator of the supposed plan, although in some circles it was said the policy of "when in doubt blame the French" could be carried too far and that the plan started in Belgium.

Spain came formally into the ring for the first time today when Perez de Ayala, Madrid's ambassador, had an interview with the British minister of agriculture.

Feeling in France.

Paris, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Economic struggle between France and England loomed as a possibility tonight. Newspapers, notably L'Information, authoritative financial daily, openly used the words "tariff war."

Since it become evident that Franco-British negotiations over tariffs had struck a snag, there have been increasing expressions of French resentment against what is termed discrimination.

The only action thus far has been the automatic application of a 15 per cent super duty, but retailers have begun a "buy French" campaign.

Delegations from channel ports and agricultural districts have been asking for government aid as a result of Britain's new tariffs, and in financial circles the belief was expressed that new French barriers will be raised.

Powers Is Unmoved As Hanging Is Urged

Crowd Overflows Opera House and Fills Street as Accused Slayer of Two Women and Three Children Goes to Trial.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Chewing gum and grinning, Harry F. Powers went on trial for his life today.

With his back to the 1,200 men, women and children who filled every seat in the town opera house, he sat on the stage of the improvised courtroom and watched eagerly while a jury was being selected.

He yawned, however, when he was accused of murdering two women and three children for profit, and he showed no trace of emotion when a demand was made he be hanged for one of the killings, that of Mrs. Dorothy Lemke, of Northboro, Mass.

During the testimony of three witnesses heard before court adjourned for the day, the bland defendant sat immobile.

When Police Chief Clarence A. Duckworth stepped down from the stand and pulled bloodstained garments worn by Mrs. Lemke from a cotton bag, Powers glanced at them and turned his interest toward a stage electrician on a platform in the wings.

Coroner Leroy C. Goff and Dr. Herbert H. Haynes told how Mrs. Lemke, Mrs. Asta Buick Eicher, of Park Ridge, Ill., and two of the latter's children had all been strangled to death, while Harry Eicher, 12, had been gagged and struck on the head with a hammer, but the doctors seemed to be playing parts in a drama that little concerned the defendant.

Townspeople, who once had filled the streets around the jail shouting his name, and who more recently had torn down part of the garage in which the killings were committed, milled around in front of the opera house, unable to gain entrance.

A queue that formed at dawn grew by the hour. Late in the afternoon scores still were standing there, hoping for an opportunity to hear ca-

I. C. C. WILL PERMIT RAIL RATE RISE NOW

Paves Way for Application of $125,000,000 Boost Immediately.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

The Interstate Commerce Commission paved the way yesterday for the prompt application of the $125,000,000 emergency freight rate increase outlined in its decision of October 16.

Withdrawing its demand that the excess revenues be pooled for the relief of the weaker roads, the Commission extended authority to the carriers to apply the new rates under their own terms of credit relief to such roads as may be in need of emergency funds.

The credit organization, however, is to be administered entirely by the railroads, the I. C. C. declining to express formally either approval or disapproval of the administrative plan presented by the rail executives on November 19.

As a step toward making the rate increases apply uniformly on all lines, advances granted in the October decision in terms of dollars per car were altered to apply in cents per ton. This, however, will not change the total new revenue appreciably. Its only effect will be to make the increases proportionate in every case to the volume of traffic. Under the original plan, roads having larger freight cars were favored.

Where the original increase was $3 per car, yesterday's ruling changed it to 6 cents a ton, and where the Octo-

One Dies, One Hurt In Maryland Crash

Philadelphian Is Killed and Another Injured Near U. of Md.

One man was killed and another slightly injured yesterday in an automobile accident at College Park, Md., near the University of Maryland.

The dead man is Alonzo M. Spivey, 38 years old, of Philadelphia, Pa., and the injured one is Samuel Wendeland, 40 years old, also of Philadelphia. Both men were taken to Casualty Hospital after the accident, which occurred about 10:30 in the morning, and Spivey died at 3:55 in the afternoon.

According to Wendeland, who was driving, the accident occurred when the steering wheel broke. The car left the road, it is said, and crashed into a telephone pole. Wendeland received slight lacerations to the left little finger.

TOUGHEST GANGSTER OF CHICAGO CAUGHT

Frank McErlane Is Captured in Wisconsin; Suspected of Slaying Wife.

Chicago, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Frank McErlane, "public enemy" and gunman, sought since October 7, when his wife and her two pet dogs were found shot to death in his automobile, was arrested today at Madison, Wis., police said tonight. He was rushed to Chicago by police squads under the command of Pat Roche, State's attorney's investigator.

McErlane, called by police Chicago's toughest gangster, was captured in a farmhouse near Madison, where he had been hiding several weeks, police were informed.

McErlane's whereabouts had been a mystery since he disappeared coincident with the slaying of his wife, formerly Marion Miller, of St. Louis, who was found shot to death in his car, abandoned on a South Side prairie. Police described her shooting and the slaying of her two dogs, whose bodies lay beneath hers in the tonneau of the automobile, as one of the most brutal and cold-blooded in their memory.

In February, 1930, McErlane was wounded by gangsters in a hospital while recovering from another gangland shooting scrape a short time before. The racketeer and gangster at that time fired several shots at his assailants with a pistol he kept beneath his pillow. Miss Miller was arrested then for questioning.

Immediately upon receiving word from Madison that McErlane had been seized, Roche and several detective bureau squads went to the Wisconsin capital. They carefully kept secret their proposed route back to Chicago and the time of their expected arrival, evidently fearing gang enemies might attempt to ambush their prisoner.

For some weeks after McErlane disappeared, police said they believed he had been slain at the same time

Brookhart's Son Fails To Attend Speed Trial

Special to The Washington Post.

Frederick, Md., Dec. 7.—J. W. Brookhart, Washington, D. C., son of U. S. Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, forfeited $10 in police court today on a charge of exceeding the speed limit.

Brookhart was arrested by a State policeman yesterday for driving too fast and posted $10 collateral for a trial before Magistrate Alton Y. Bennett today. When the case was called Brookhart failed to appear and the collateral was forfeited. The car he was driving was listed in the name of his father.

Lenz's Partner Is Set One In Bridge War's First Hand

Culbertson and Wife Take Early Lead of 50 Points After He Announces He Will Retire From Match Play Following Lengthy Contest.

New York, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Oswald Jacoby was set one in playing three notrump in the first hand of the Culbertson-Lenz bridge match tonight and the Culbertsons went into the lead with 50 points.

Lenz dealt and bid a spade in the North. Mrs. Culbertson, East, passed. Jacoby, South, bid two notrump. Culbertson, West, passed, and Lenz bid three notrump which became the contract.

New York, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—Ely Culbertson and Sidney Lenz, as solemn as a pair of bereaved owls, opened their celebrated contract bridge battle at the Hotel Chatham tonight.

The first rubber was held up an hour past the scheduled time of opening, due to the frenzied conduct of a hundred cameramen, referees, Marines, butlers, children, nursemaids, book publishers, kibitzers, and radio broadcasters.

From 8 p. m. until about 9:30, the drawing room in which the first 75 rubbers are to be played was a madhouse. The four contestants were jockeyed around like marionettes. They had to deal, bid, smile, frown, bow and sneer for the benefit of the photographers.

Everybody was talking at once, and Mrs. Culbertson, the one player plainly suffering from stage fright, seemed to be approaching a state of collapse. The tension, for her, was not relieved one whit when Ely suddenly entered the room with the two Culbertson children, Fifi and Jumpy-Bid Ely. The children had been made ready for bed and were wearing blue satin bathrobes.

Mrs. Culbertson, known as Jo in her own home, grew slightly hysterical when she saw the children, sur-

UNABLE TO PAY ON YOUNG PLAN, GERMANY AVERS

Officially Cites Inability in 50-Page Document to Committee.

AMERICAN DECLINES TO BECOME CHAIRMAN

Other Delegates Are Named; Bruening to Answer Hitler Attack Over Radio.

Basel, Switzerland, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—The German nation tonight officially declared her inability to continue reparations payments under the Owen D. Young plan.

Dr. Carl Melchoir distributed a 50-page document describing the Reich's "unprecedented condition" to the six other original members of the Young plan advisory committee. The committee organized today under chairmanship of Alfredo Beneduce, of Italy, to investigate the German economic condition preparatory to a readjustment of reparations.

It was learned that the document prepared by the German delegate categorically stated that it is impossible to continue payment of reparations on the scale provided in the Young plan.

Declines Chairmanship.

The vast interests of the United States involved in negotiations for readjustment of German reparations payments were emphasized when Dr. Walter W. Stewart, American member of the committee, was offered the chairmanship, but declined. His refusal was interpreted as an indicatoin that the United States intends to take an active part in the negotiations and desires that Stewart be free to support the American views.

As chairman of the committee, which will investigate the capacity of Germany to pay reparations, Stewart would be handicapped in the general debate because of the responsibilities of the post.

The United States does not receive reparations payments direct from Germany, although payments on war debts owed by the former allied nations actually depend upon German reparations. The chief American interest, however, lies in the vast sums invested in Germany by private bankers, including some $1,200,000,000 now frozen in short-term loans. Germany's chief private creditors are Great Britain and America.

Private Debts Consideration.

Officially the committee will merely investigate the reparations angle, but it will undoubtedly be necessary to consider the private debts as directly supplementary to the reparations question.

The meeting of the advisory committee opened at 12:20 p. m. under temporary chairmanship of Gates W. McGarrah, American head of the International Bank board. The opening had been delayed for an hour because of controversy over selection of the chairman.

The German delegates had objected to a French or Belgian chairman and suggested that a selection be made among the representatives of Switzerland, Jugoslavia, Sweden or Holland. The four countries were not represented, however, on the original advisory committee of seven, and it was necessary to abandon the suggestion.

After the advisory committee was organized, the four other delegates were named, bringing the total up to

Brothers on Trial In Irish Arms Plot

One of Republican Leaders Described as "Most Dangerous Man."

Dublin, Irish Free State, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—George Gilmore, described by authorities as the "most dangerous man in Ireland," went on trial before the military tribunal today with his brother, Charles, on charges growing out of the discovery of an armed cache in the mountains near here.

The brothers were manacled and heavily guarded by soldiers and detectives. George recently engineered the escape of a number of republican prisoners from Mount Joy prison and both of the brothers nearly gained their freedom by holding up the warden with a dummy pistol.

The defendants, who are regarded as the brains behind the republican movement in the northern part of the Free State, smiled sardonically at the precautions and cross-examined the state's witnesses with coolness and skill. The trial will continue tomorrow.

GARNER IS ELECTED SPEAKER AS NEW CONGRESS CONVENES; HUNGER ARMY LEAVES TODAY

1,500 Marchers Rebuffed at Every Turn in Plan to Demand Aid.

GOVERNMENT HEADS REFUSE AUDIENCES

One Spectator Only Person Arrested; Meetings Over Nation Set Feb. 4.

The "hunger marchers," thwarted in their attempts to present their proposed unemployment insurance legislation to President Hoover and Congress, will leave the Capital today.

Beginning at 7 o'clock this morning the motley mob of 1,500 paraders will begin their journey homeward. The column from the North will leave at 7 o'clock, and the one from the West at 9 o'clock.

Before they decided to depart, however, they served notice on the Capital that they will return here late in February with a "superior force to sweep aside the armed thugs of the Government."

Instructions were given to the marchers at a meeting in the Washington Auditorium to return to their respective homes and mobilize another hunger army to return here to force upon Congress the legislation which the "army" advocates.

March to Night Billets.

After listening to speeches for four hours, the mob marched from the Auditorium to the Salvation Army headquarters and the old First Presbyterian hurch, where they were billeted for the night. After being served hot meals, several group meetings were held to organize the return to the apital in February.

Though highly pleased with the efficient manner in which his men handled the parades, Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford last night issued an order for continued exercise of vigilance over the marchers.

"The threatening ommunistic tenor of the speeches at the auditorium warrants a continuance of close surveillance and measures to prevent disturbances that may be planned by concentrated efforts on the part of small groups before the departure of the 'hunger marchers,'" the order read.

The marchers sent a telegram last night to Tom Mooney, serving a life sentence in California for participation in the 1916 Preparedness Day Bombing, greeting him on his forty-ninth birthday and encouraging him in his fight for a pardon.

Government Heads Assailed.

The pent-up invectives of leaders of the march against President Hoover and the Government were unloosed upon the paraders at the Auditorium meeting, which was opened by the singing of the "Internationale," Communist anthem.

The gathering received the "warmest revolutionary greetings" from William W. Weinstone, of New York, a member of the central committee of the Communist Party of America of the International Soviet Union.

Massed police discouraged any attempt at disorder. In the three demonstrations, at the Capitol, the White House and in front of the American Federation of Labor Building, there was no overt attempt at disorder. Only one person was arrested; in front of the White House, where a

Machine-Gunners Rob Ohio Bank of $13,500

New Philadelphia, Ohio, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Three robbers, using a machine gun and other weapons, held up the Citizens State Bank at Strasburg, near here today and escaped with $13,500 in gold, silver and currency and an undetermined amount of bonds.

After setting up the machine gun at the rear of the bank office, and pointing it at the front entrance, the robbers took 30 minutes to loot the vault, which they had forced two employes to open. The robbers took 25 bags of silver, weighing 200 pounds, and worth $1,500; one sack of gold worth $4,000, and $8,000 in currency.

Abandoned in Cold, Male Infant Dies

Child Succumbs Half Hour After Being Found in Home's Driveway.

An unidentified baby boy, about 1 month old, was found early yesterday morning in a driveway of a home on the Annandale road about 1½ miles from Lee highway. The child evidently had been abandoned for some time, as it died of exposure half an hour after being removed to the offices of Dr. C. A. Ransom, of Falls Church.

Daniel S. Thomas, colored, of Falls Church, discovered the child near his home and immediately summoned police. The baby was removed to Dr. Ransom's office and although every attempt was made to save its life, it died from the effects of its exposure.

The child was well dressed. A blanket was found on the other side of the driveway from where the baby was found, and led police to believe that the child had rolled out of its cover or else the blanket had been hurriedly left.

PROSECUTOR IS TOLD OF V. M. I. SHORTAGE

Step Taken After Session of State Auditing Body; $13,500 Involved.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—An alleged shortage of approximately $10,000 in the accounts of J. W. McClung, until recently treasurer of Virginia Military Institute, was communicated to Commonwealth's Attorney William W. Ackerly, of Rock Bridge County, tonight by T. Coleman Andrews, State auditor of public accounts.

The auditor's action came after a meeting of the State auditing committee, before which he placed the results of a partial audit of the former V. M. I. official's books, which was said to show a discrepancy of $10,000, and Mr. Andrews said to this must be added an item of approximately $3,500 in interest.

Mr. Ackerly said he would await arrival of the report before deciding what action his office would take.

The alleged shortage was reported to the V. M. I. board in November by a member of the State auditor's staff and Maj. McClung was relieved of his duties November 16.

Later the progress of the audit revealed that the alleged shortage was $8,500, and this was reported to Gov. Pollard by Mr. Andrews. The audit to date, which covers "items taken at random" during the period 1922 to 1931, showed a discrepancy of approximately $10,000 today.

An exhaustive audit, covering the 18 years of Maj. McClung's tenure of office, is now underway. Mr. Andrews said that he could not say how extensive the alleged shortage might be until it was complete.

Gen. John A. Lejeune, superintendent of V. M. I., today pointed out that the greater part of the reported shortage grew out of Maj. McClung's handling of the institution's funds several years ago, and added that the official was relieved of his duties shortly after the matter was presented to the board.

$15,000,000 in Assets Are Sold for $900,000

Labelle, Fla., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The properties of the Southern Sugar Co. at Clewiston and in three south Florida counties, valued at approximately $15,000,000, were sold by a receiver today for $900,000 to J. K. Morgan and Louis B. Warren, representing a reorganized group.

Only one bid was received. The order of sale was issued by W. W. Sinclair, special master, and provides for the transfer of the properties to the United States Sugar Co.

CAPPER TO INQUIRE INTO HARTMAN CASE

Will See If Criticisms Were Justified; New Faces Due on District Committee.

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, chairman of the Senate District committee, yesterday served notice of his purpose to make careful inquiry into the qualifications of Harleigh H. Hartman, vice chairman of the District public utilities commission now serving under a recess appointment to a second term.

Senator Capper said he had made no effort to determine the facts behind criticisms of Mr. Hartman in Washington newspapers several months ago, but believed that the matter demanded prompt attention of the District committee.

"It is my purpose to call a meeting of the committee as soon as it has been formally completed by the Senate and one of the most important matters demanding the committee's attention is the Hartman matter," Senator Capper said. "I do not wish to say anything which would indicate any prejudgment. All I know about the question is what has been printed in the newspapers and called to my attention."

Published criticism of Mr. Hartman grew out of correspondence which is said to have passed between Mr. Hartman and representatives of utilities interests prior to his appointment as a member of the public utilities commission. His appointment was confirmed by the Senate and on expiration of his term, after adjournment of the last Congress, President Hoover gave him a recess appointment. Senate confirmation of a full term is necessary.

There are likely to be several new faces on the District committee of both House and Senate, although the new members have not been selected. Senator Cole Blease (Democrat), of South Carolina, a member of the committee in the last Congress, was defeated for reelection. Senator Arthur R. Gould (Republican), of Maine, retired. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, has indicated his desire to get off the committee. There was one

Azama Yama Volcano In Eruption in Japan

The earth around the mountain shook and lava from the crater was shot far into the air.

Hawks, in Narrow Escape, Sees Bayles' Death Cause

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Cutting through the air at times well in excess of 300 miles an hour, Capt. Frank Hawks today "limped" into the airport here with a new unofficial speed record for a Cleveland-to-New York flight.

Saved from a fate such as befell Lowell Bayles at Detroit last Saturday, he said, by the 10,000 foot altitude at which he was traveling, Hawks landed at the end of an hour and 45 minutes journey with a landing wire of his right wing broken. He left Cleveland at 2 p. m. and arrived at Roosevelt field at 3:45 p. m.

The flight, more than 30 miles longer than the Cleveland-to-Newark journey in which Maj. James A. Doolittle last September 4 established a record of 1 hour 45 minutes and 58 seconds, was made on the wings of a storm which at times pushed the tail of his plane at a velocity of 50 to 70 miles an hour.

His average speed for the 455 miles, Hawks said, was 257 miles an hour.

His escape from a death similar to that of Bayles, Hawks said, came 50 miles before the end of the trip.

He was speeding over the New Jersey-Pennsylvania State border at an altitude of 10,000 feet when the landing wire, which runs along the Texan Escorted to Chair as Democrats Cheer in Triumph.

SENATE ASSEMBLES FOR SHORT SESSION

Large Crowd Sees Opening; President's Message to Be Read Today.

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

A short, florid-faced Texan with fierce, white eyebrows ascended to the chair of the Speaker of the House yesterday, while 218 other Democrats loosed a yell reminiscent of the Jackson era.

Above the din could be heard a wild cowboy cry.

"Yip, yip! Yeow!"

That was Representative Richard M. Kleberg, a former cowpuncher, of Corpus Christi, Tex., the newest member of the House.

Kleberg's exultant yell, and the noisy vocal symphony of which it was a part, marked the return of the Democrats to power in the House, and the election of John N. Garner, of Texas, as Speaker, the first Democratic Speaker since Champ Clark.

Senate Session Quintet.

It was the highlight of the convening of the Seventy-second Congress, a Congress which, to use words Herbert Hoover has uttered in the past, must try to lead the country from an economic Valley Forge to an economic Yorktown.

By comparison with the House drama, the convening of the Senate was a dull affair, lasting not much more than a half hour. Thirty new senators were sworn in, after which an adjournment was taken out of respect to the late Senator Dwight W. Morrow, of New Jersey, and the late Senator Thaddeus Caraway, of Arkansas.

The crowd that gathered at the Capitol yesterday was of extraordinary size, one such as ordinarily is seen only on inauguration day.

House Scene Exciting.

The explanation was that Capitol Hill was presenting a double attraction—the convening of Congress and the parade of the so-called hunger marchers. As a spectacle, the latter was not nearly as exciting as the scene in the House. Thanks to a sane police policy, not a blow was struck, and the threat of the hunger march leaders to invade the Senate and House chambers evaporated in the chill December air.

Today the minds of the legislators will turn to business. President Hoover's annual message on the "state of the Union" is ready, and will be read in both the Senate and the House shortly after noon. The President has no intention of emulating Woodrow Wilson by reading the document in person.

In his message, which is a short one, President Hoover will chart a course which he believes points the way to recovery from the business depression.

By nightfall he will have some idea of what Congress thinks about his program.

Late yesterday Speaker Garner and Senator Joe T. Robinson, the minority leader in the Senate, each appointed a "policy committee." These two committees will meet today to consider their own legislative program and to determine how far they will go along with the President.

The ten men on each committee are regarded as the most able Democrats in either House. Speaker Garner heads the House committee and Senator Robinson the Senate committee.

The President's recommendations with regard to increased taxes to pare down a prospective $2,000,000,000 deficit will be contained in his annual budget message, which will be delivered to Congress tomorrow.

Then, on the following day, he will send to Congress a special message urging approval of his one-year moratorium on intergovernmental debts.

May Discipline Progressives.

After the election of Speaker Garner yesterday, there were reports that five of the House Republican Progressives might be punished for bolting Representative Bertrand H. Snell, of New

SPAIN'S BASIC LAW HELD COMPROMISE

On Eve of Popular Vote on Constitution, Zamora Reviews Work.

Editor's Note:—Spain, last of the Bourbon monarchies, will vote on her new republican constitution this week. Niceto Alcala Zamora, who is expected to be the first president, tells in this specially written article just what sort of government Spanish statesmen have fashioned. He tells of the compromises effected to separate church from state, to gain votes for long-sheltered Spanish women, and to guard against too great power by president or parliament. He declares both private property and labor's rights have been protected.

By NICETO ALCALA ZAMORA.

(Copyright, 1931, by the Associated Press.)

Madrid, Dec. 7.—When the committee charged with preparing a draft for the Constitution of the Spanish Republic commenced its work, it was easy to note the influence of Constitutions of the most modern republics of Europe and America. This was specially true of the German and the Mexican Constitutions.

The Mexican influence seems to have been a rebirth of the old traditions of Spanish liberties, and as an example of it we see in the new Constitution, the importance given to the Presidency and the Supreme Court.

North American influence also is noticeable in the supremacy of the Constitution, the possible Federal organization of the several provinces of Spain, and the redistrictive system of reforms to the fundamental law.

Originality Is Marked.

A stamp of originality also is noted in the Constitution, especially in the full freedom given by the assembly from the beginning to the heterogeneous government, so that the government might solve various existing problems.

Thus were formed compromises on views held by the parties represented in the assembly, which are so essentially different. This was noted in the discussion on electoral rights, in which the moderates proposed a minimum age of 28 years for male voters against the extreme left's idea on the subject. The left advanced feminine suffrage as a compromise with the right on the matter of age.

The spirit of compromise has been noteworthy throughout the debates on the Constitution.

Federal Type Is New.

On regional autonomies we have arrived at a special type of federalism. Those provinces desiring it may have it, and those who do not request it may continue as heretofore.

This was the result of the famous pact of San Sebastian—preliminary to the revolution—and of friendly discussions that I, as head of the government, held with the Regionalists. The subject is left for the approval of all the parties.

On the religious problem, while full accord was impossible, I am glad to say that the idea of a closed mind did not prevail. The separation of church and state was hardly objected to in the assembly. Neither was there objection to the provision for a concordat.

The elimination of salaries to the clergy was agreed after a compromise which leaves the church two years for its reorganization so that it may provide the emoluments of the priests.

The clause prohibiting religious orders to engage in teaching or industries may be able to survive, perhaps with just one exception, although it may cause the imposition of severe precautions. Another compromise was the permission to celebrate religious activities outside the churches.

It was impossible to come to a compromise on the matter of whether there should be a bicameral or unicameral government. The majority of delegates rejected the bicameral idea, but as the parties insisted upon two houses, an attempt was made to bring to life the old senate under a new name—the council. The attempt, however, was unsuccessful, the measure being defeated by nine votes.

The problem now awaits some experimentation. The lack of an upper house offers an opportunity for serious thought and it brings a new problem—that of combining the powers of the government.

Middle Road Sought.

The new regime has been approved so that it may be neither typically "presidentialist" nor parliamentarian, and medium formulas will be part of our experiment.

With the deputies in Parliament will gather an equal number of delegates of the people to elect the second and subsequent presidents of the Republic, since the first is to be designated by the constitutional cortes.

Among the most interesting powers given to the president are those of veto and dissolution, which may be exercised only twice. These prerogatives the president may exercise in disputes with the cortes, but the cortes on the other hand is empowered to impeach the president and even to throw him out of office with due process by a consenting quorum.

Spanish Vision Shown.

The level-headedness and vision of the Spanish people already have been proved. In the revolution the people gave the whole world an example of their love for peace. This has been shown again and again in our long history of compromises, and in the peaceful solution of our problems.

The people have reached a degree of culture that permits them to put into practice the most democratic of constitutions.

The social phases of the constitution should not inspire any fears, as it is respectful toward private property and it opens an ample horizon of pacific evolution for the morrow with its resolute protection to labor and with its return of crown properties to the state.

Good will should produce its fruit for the welfare of the country which weighed so heavily on the history of civilization of the world and which now, in its rebirth, has inscribed in its constitution principles of the most generous international fraternity.

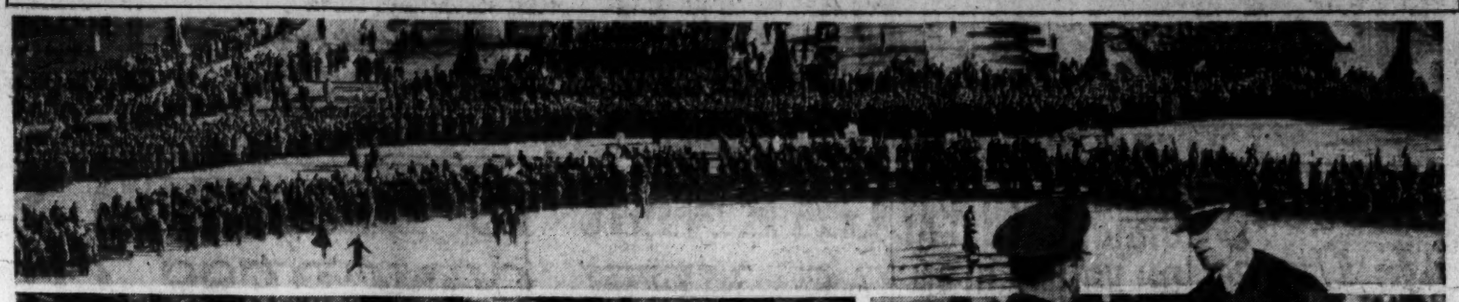
SCENES AS HUNGER MARCHERS VAINLY SOUGHT TO INVADE CONGRESS



Post Staff and Associated Press Photos.

Views as the hunger marchers paraded in the Capital yesterday. Upper, a panorama of the Capitol Plaza as the marchers waited in vain to enter the building, while crowds of curious watched. Below, at the left, shows a group of 29 marchers on the way to the White House, escorted by 24 policemen, which was about the usual ratio. At the right is Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, superintendent of police, as he stopped his motorcycle long enough to give instructions to Inspector O. T. Davis. At the left, below, Gen. Jacob Coxey, who led an army on the Capital in 1894, watches the demonstration from a vantage point on the Capitol steps alongside a policeman. To the right is Herbert Benjamin, organizer of the Unemployed Councils, who attempted to enter the Senate, House and White House, all vainly.

spectator, who laughed too boisterously, was charged with disorderly conduct.

Some apprehension was felt in front of the American Federation of Labor Building, when Herbert Benjamin, noted agitator and field representative of the hunger march, threatened to send the 1,500 demonstrators into the building, unless their committee, which had presented a comdemnatory resolution to William L. Green, president of the A. F. of L., appeared on the streets.

Contingency Is Averted.

This contingency was averted, however, when their delegates, headed by John S. Hecker, of Chicago, returned to the streets with the condemnation of their subversive intentions still ringing in their ears. The only place where they received an audience was in the offices of Mr. Green.

Hecker, who claims to belong to the Painters Local, No. 275 of Chicago, presented a resolution to Mr. Green denouncing Matthew Woll and the action of the American Federation of Labor in pronouncing disfavor upon the subject of unemployment insurance.

Mr. Green labeled Hecker and his five associates on the committee as "dupes and tools of the leaders of the movement." "The American Federation of Labor is interested in the welfare of the millions of men and women in this country, and will listen to any responsible complaint from them.

"We will not, however, consider the complaints of the leaders of those who inspired this march. All they are interested in is the overthrow of the Government. They do not want unemployment insurance. That's the last thing they want. They thrive on misery and distress."

Weary and tired from their long ride to the Capital and the 3-mile parade through the city, the marchers rested in the Auditorium and a flood of inflammatory oratory was unloosed upon them. Herbert Benjamin, organizer of the march, who headed the committee that sought entrance to the Senate, in his report to the meeting, said the marchers "would return with a force superior to the thugs of the ruling classes."

He characterized as the outstanding victory of the day the fact that police did not attempt to seize the banners and placards as the column marched into the Capitol Grounds. "For the first time in the history of the country," he said, "the Capitol has resounded to the demands of the working class clamoring for relief and the strains of the 'Internationale.'"

Other Meetings Planned.

The mass meeting decided to hold a series of unemployment demonstrations throughout the country on February 4. These demonstrations will be for the furtherance of the movement for unemployment insurance and cash relief.

After oratory had been hurled at them for more than an hour, some in the audience began to doze and soon many of them were asleep while others disturbed their slumbers by lusty boos, every time President Hoover, Matthew Woll, the Senate and the House of Representatives were mentioned.

The only instance where any force was used was when a committee of twelve, headed by Benjamin, sought to gain admission into the Senate wing. After being told they could leave their petition with Sergeant at Arms Barry, the group tried to walk in, but was ejected.

As they plodded from the Capitol, they were flanked on either side by solid ranks of policemen. When they reached the American Federation of Labor Building, the column stopped and a committee, headed by Hecker, was sent into the building.

They were met in the director's room by Mr. Green where they presented their resolution. Each of committee, who claimed to be affiliated with the organization, registered his name. After Mr. Green delivered his criticism of the motives of the leaders of the march, the group left.

Green Receives Proposals.

The only place where any of the proposals were received was in Mr. Green's office. At the White House and in the Senate wing they refused to leave their petitions with those delegated to receive them.

From the American Federation of Labor the marchers walked down K street, where J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, watched their passage with some interest. They turned into Twentieth street and then went to the Auditorium.

As they filed into the building, a commissary wagon gave out sandwiches and apples. Dispensation of the food slowed down their entry and it was 4 o'clock before the meeting got under way.

4,000 Watch Marchers.

About 4,000 persons watched the marchers as they halted in front of the White House, where Benjamin sought to gain admission to the executive offices. He was met by Richard Jervis, chief of the White House Secret Service, who told him that neither he nor any other members of the committee could see the President.

Benjamin replied he could see no reason why the President shouldn't receive him, since Mr. Hoover receives representatives of other organizations. Jervis offered to take any petition or messages they had to the President.

Benjamin refused to leave the petition with him. Then he left and joined other members of the committee who were herded on the north side of Pennsylvania avenue, surrounded by a cordon of police. Benjamin again returned to Jervis who was at the northwest gate of the White House and told him no statement or petition would be left and that the marchers would make their plea in another way.

Policemen Stand By.

William H. Moran, chief of the Secret Service, stood near Jervis when the discussion was in progress. Details of policemen stood near the iron gates ready to close them in case trouble ensued.

Tony Minervich, a Pennsylvania miner, and David Pondexter, colored, of Indianapolis, mounted the shoulders of other marchers and told the crowd that President Hoover "had barricaded himself behind the police and refused to see them." "The workers," he said, "will not take 'no' for an answer."

Isaiah Hawkins, colored, of Pittsburgh, then denounced the Government, and the signal was given for the march to Ninth street and Massachusetts avenue, where in the A. F. of L. Building their delegates were met by Mr. Green. Hecker, head of the committee, was lifted to the shoulders of the marchers and through a megaphone shouted, "Green called us Communists. Down with the labor racketeers. Down with Green and Woll. Down with the labor fakers."

Earlier the members of the committee, headed by Benjamin, was turned away from the doors of the Senate by Sergeant at Arms Barry, when they refused to turn over to him the petition which they wanted to present to the Senate.

They returned to the plaza, where the marchers were gathered in a semicircle. A conference was held and Benjamin, with two others, including a colored man, again sought admission to the Senate, but were sent away by Capt. Stephen Gnash, commander of the Capitol police force.

Senator King, of Utah, came to the plaza, and while talking with Benjamin, offered to present any petition they had on the floor of the Senate at the proper time.

"Just who the hell are you?" asked Benjamin.

"I am Senator King and I will be glad to help you."

Refuses King's Offer.

"We didn't come here to deal with individuals," Benjamin replied, "and I don't want you to present anything for us."

"Very well," said Senator King.

William F. Dunne, of New York, one of those who sought admission to the Senate, was raised on the shoulders of others.

Directing his remarks to the crowd of marchers he shouted through a megaphone:

"Comrades and fellow workers. The Congress of the United States has refused to hear the proposals of the unemployed councils. The entire proceedings so far as your committee was concerned were conducted through the police."

Received With Silence.

"Through his action Vice President Curtis expressed the attitude of the Hoover hunger program. Comrades of the hunger march, you will proceed to the White House and there elect a committee to present your demands to the President."

His address was received in silence. When he announced that the march to the White House was on, there were a few feeble cheers from the mob. Headed by their leaders, they started out the driveway, chanting their slogan, "We want unemployment insurance."

There was evident uneasiness as the marchers assembled on John Marshall place for the parade to the Capitol. They raised aloft banners carrying such slogans as "To hell with charity, we wan't work," "Stop dumping—feed our children," "Defend the Soviet Union," "Down with Gifford's stinking charity," "Fight for Unemployment insurance."

Throw Food to Floors.

They were in an ugly mood as they mobilized for the march. The food they were served was unsatisfactory and they threw it on the floors at the Salvation Army and at the Central Union Mission. Many of them went to their own commissary.

Spectators on John Marshall place outnumbered the marchers, and a few boos were heard from the spectators as they shouted their slogans. Headed by Benjamin, and to the tunes of the "Internationale" and parodies of "Marching Through Georgia" and "Hallelujah," the column started to the Capitol.

A Communist band from New York, equipped with uniforms of the Soviet army, and bearing the international star of the Red army on the bass drum, played "Solidarity" and the "Internationale."

An escort of motorcycle police cleared traffic as the procession started at 10:45 o'clock. At the northwest driveway to the Capitol, a force of 100 policemen was stationed to remove objectionable signs from the marchers.

This point had been regarded by Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford as the crucial point. At this point, if the regulations were to be strictly enforced, it was expected that trouble would occur. The Capitol regulations provide that no banners be displayed on the Capitol Grounds.

Vice President Curtis, however, decided to permit display of banners so long as none of them were objectionable. Benjamin had told police officials the banners would be removed as they entered the grounds. But the truck, in which they were to be temporarily placed, was in the rear of the column.

To Roped-Off Area.

As they entered the plaza, they were directed to a roped-off area, and segregated from spectators. The Police Department, manned to full strength, presented a line of blue uniforms between the marchers and the entrances to the Capitol.

On the parapets stood policemen armed with riot guns and tear gas bombs, ready to quell any disorder. Secret Service men and hundreds of detectives were mingling with the crowd and were secreted inside of the building. A half dozen police patrols, an Emergency Hospital ambulance, attended by a nurse and a doctor, were parked near the marchers' section.

Squads of policemen, skilled in the use of tear gas bombs, were stationed at various points on the grounds, ready to hurl the gas bombs to disperse the crowd if any disorder took place. Motorcycle policemen presented a vanguard before the uniformed men, who were lined between the demonstrators and the steps.

In the middle of the semicircle formed by the marchers stood the band. While the discussions were in progress the band played Communist anthems while the mob sang.

Gen. Glassford, astride a motorcycle, kept contact with his men, placed at strategic points, so as to be abreast of the situation at all times. Every vantage point on the Capitol was lined with spectators. About 10,000 persons witnessed the spectacle.

The marchers left the Capitol at 12:20 and reached the White House at 1:10. Along the line of march the spectators were inclined to be complacently tolerant of the shouts of the marchers. On either side of the column as it trod through a circuitous route to the four points of concentration marched solid lines of policemen.

Hunger Army Not in Class With Ranks of Pie-Hungry

By JOHN J. DALY

WHAT a day!

Hunger marchers, hungry legislators and their hungry constituents, hungry onlookers watching the paraders with flying banners, "On to Washington!"

Washington is a wise old town—made wise by the course of the years strolling down the labyrinthine halls of time.

So Congress, instead of having a riot outside its doors, opened with prayer.

It may close with profanity, and the newly elected Speaker, the flashing-eyed Jack Garner, may break a few more gavels; but even this will be nothing new, as Speakers before him, unable to hear themselves above the tumult, have tried to smash their way into silence, their gavels sent into splinters, flying left and right.

• • • •

NO, there is nothing new in all this, nor in the march of the hunger soldiers. We have hunger marchers in our homes every day, the grand raid on the dining room for breakfast, dinner and supper—with a free lunch on the side.

If the pie-hunters, now should ever march on Washington, Uncle Sam will have to call out the Army and the Navy.

From time immemorial hungry pie-hunters have had their eyes on Congress. But they come as spies, not in serried battalions.

The hunger army, which was not quite an army at all, merely a little band seeing the sights in the city, under police guidance, from the Capitol to the White House, were awed by one particular sign on all the street cars: "Zoo—Nation's Finest Reptile House."

• • • •

AS the hunger marchers surrounded the Capitol, singing the "Internationale," the Nationalists, on the sidelines, began humming a new refrain, born of the moment, to the tune of an old and revered melody, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

"Tramp, tramp, tramp the tramps are marching,
Marching, marching all around,
In the Land of Washington,
Like the shadow of the Hun,
Hear the tramps a-tramping on the hallow'd ground."

British Specialist Sees Puglike Faces for World

London (U.P.).—Curious facts about the nose were revealed by Harold S. Barwell, a specialist, at the Institute of Hygiene.

For instance: Nearly a quart of water is supplied by the nose in 24 hours in moistening the air we breathe; the nose warms and moistens at least 10,000 liters of air in the 24 hours, and frees it of some 30,000 germs.

Barwell thinks that puglike faces will be prevalent among human beings in a few hundred years.

Mule, 33, Still Works.

Mexico, Mo. (U.P.).—J. E. Weinand, farmer near here, has a bay mare mule 33 years old, which works in harness every day. Weinand bought the mule as a 2-year-old in 1901 and has been using her ever since as a work-horse.

10 DIE, 13 WOUNDED IN UPRISING IN PERU

Most of Dead and Injured Members of Opposition to New President.

Lima, Peru, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—A Trujillo dispatch to El Comercio says 10 persons were killed and 13 wounded today in fighting between citizens and police at Paijan on the eve of President-elect Luis M. Sanchez Cerro's inauguration.

Most of the dead and wounded, the dispatch said, were members of the Aprista party, which supported Vicor Haya de la Torre in the presidential campaign. A strike which began on nearby sugar estates had spread to Trujillo, stronghold of the Aprista faction, it was added.

Col. Sanchez Cerro will be inaugurated as Constitutional President of Peru at noon tomorrow, when he takes the oath of office and is decorated by the presiding officer of the assembly with the red and white sash which is the presidential insignia.

It will be a triumphant return to power, for he resigned under pressure nine months ago as head of the junta that overthrew former President Leguia in 1930 and for a time was in exile.

Hailed as the man that overthrew the "eleven years' dictatorship" of President Leguia, he was accused of trying to elect himself president and forced out as provisional president by the navy and a revolt of several military garrisons.

His new regime will come into power with the Leftist parties determined to oppose his administration in Congress.

His cabinet, which was announced tonight, will be headed by Dr. German Arenas, as president of the council and minister of public works, railways and health.

Other cabinet ministers will be Dr. Luis Miro Quesada, foreign affairs; Jose Cateriano, finance; Dr. Eufrasio Alvarez, justice and education; Dr. Jose M. Garcia Bedoya, interior, or posts and telegraphs; Col. Manuel Rodriguez, war, and Alfredo Benavides, marine.

Sanchez Cerro was elected by popular vote on October 11. He is 42 years old, and one of the youngest presidents Peru has had. He has had an active career in the army and was military attache at Washington for several years.

RELIEF ACCORD SEEN BY 3 BIG FARM UNITS

Debenture Plan Figures in Program to Supplement U. S. Board Work.

Chicago, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The "big three" of organized agriculture, the American Farm Bureau, Grange and National Farmers Union, neared an agreement tonight on a plan to supplement stabilization operations of the Federal Farm Board with the equalization fee and export debenture principles of grain surplus control.

This was learned from leaders of the "big three" attending the annual meeting of the Farm Bureau.

L. J. Taber, master of the Grange, said under present plans legislation to realize such a program would be offered in this session of Congress.

Taber and John Simpson, of the Farmers Union, were guests of the Farm Bureau and conferred during the day with Edward A. O'Neal, its president.

Varied Stands.

The debenture plan has long been the protege of the Grange; the Farm Bureau, in turn, has been the advocate of the equalization fee, while the Farmers Union has concurred in the fee plan with a proviso that the price of domestically consumed products meet the cost of production.

Always divergent in times past, this is the first time these farm organizations have been so near an accord on a surplus control measure.

Secretary of Agriculture Hyde messaged he would not be able to attend the farm bureau meeting. However, Sam H. Thompson, grain member and president for many years of the farm bureau federation, represented the farm board.

Taber said the "harmony program" of the "big three" would allow optional use by the farm board of either the fee or debenture plan and would eliminate future invoking of the emergency stabilization clause of the marketing act.

Under the fee plan, the cost of surplus control would rest upon the grower, and this, President O'Neal, of the farm bureau said, would "definitely take the Government out of business."

Harmony Program.

O'Neal said agriculture "is perfectly willing to get the Government out of business if it gets out of business for everybody."

The grange has already provided for such a "harmony program," while both Simpson and O'Neal said the plan would probably be worked out within the next few weeks.

Adoption was expected during the farm bureau meeting of resolutions authorizing its leaders to join with the grange and farmers' union in this plan.

"The big need," Taber said, "is to make the tariff effective on the exportable surplus. That's what the grange, the farmers' union and the farm bureau want. The fee and the deebnture are just two different ways of accomplishing this."

TOKYO REPORTS NEW 'BANDIT' ACTIVITIES

Japanese Colliery Official and Family Reported Held as Hostages.

(Associated Press.)

Fresh activity by Manchurian "bandits" was reported by the Japanese yesterday.

A colliery official and his family at Nyuhsintai were captured by raiders and held as hostages.

A government spokesman at Tokyo declared it was up to Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, deposed governor of Manchuria, to prevent armed conflict at Chinchow.

In Paris some process was reported in the League of Nations council's attempt to arrive at a settlement, but many barriers remained.

Mukden, Manchuria, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Renewed activity by what the Japanese termed "bandits" was reported by army headquarters tonight.

Japanese Are Hostages.

A Japanese colliery at Nyuhsintai was looted by several hundred men who made prisoners of one of the officials and his family. Soldiers and police pursued the raiders, who were holding the prisoners as hostages.

At Kungtaipu, 20 miles southwest of Mukden, raiders attacked a Japanese house. Three soldiers and the householder drove them off after a fight.

There also were reports of bandit activity at Yaochienhutse, on the South Manchuria Railway, where a group of twenty or so was driven away by police.

Paris, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—China, Japan and the League of Nations Council appeared tonight to be approaching agreement on how to dispose of Japan's demand for the right to act against bandits in Manchuria.

Neutral Zone Is Snag.

But the question of Chinchow and the establishment of a neutral zone remained to discourage hopes of an early settlement of the conflict.

The belief prevailed that all parties would agree to omit reference to bandit measures from the resolution embodying the council's peace program. The Japanese proposed to reserve this right in a separate declaration.

It was not assured, however, that all members of the council would remain silent in the face of this Japanese reservation. But leaders hoped the procedure would enable the council to satisfy Japan without indorsing the principle that one country has the right to take police measures in the territory of another.

SENATE G. O. P. FEARS MOSES ROW RESULT

Apprehension Felt Over Possibility of Losing Control Today.

(Associated Press.)

Senate Republican leaders expressed apprehension last night over the consequences of the fight impending against the reelection of George Moses, of New Hampshire, as president pro tempore.

Loss of Senate control to the Democrats and days of balloting on the issue were the two consequences uppermost in the minds of the party chieftains as they held conference after conference on the situation due to break on the Senate floor today.

Senator Moses, who first stirred the wrath of the Western Republican Independents by terming them "sons of the wild jackass," declined to comment on the fight against him by this group.

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the party leader, who has been trying to iron out the Republican quarrel, said last night that the outlook was somewhat "chaotic."

Friends of Moses conferred, but they would say nothing. If they undertake retaliation against the Western Independents, leaders fear a party explosion which may result in the Democrats taking over the Senate. That party, however, has no disposition to assume this responsibility without a party majority. They can only muster 45 votes to a line-up of 48 Republicans and one Farmer-Labor.

New Representative Keeps 12-Year-Old Vow to Wife

John W. Boehne, Jr., of Indiana, Also Preserves Family Tradition in Taking Seat in House, Post Held Previously by His Father.

John W. Boehne, jr., newly elected representative from Indiana, yesterday kept a promise and preserved a family tradition when he took his seat with the Seventy-second conference.

The promise was made to Miss Selma O. Heitmuller, of Washington, twelve years ago when he was on a tour of duty here as an Army officer. Miss Heitmuller then became Mrs. Boehne.

The tradition was established by John W. Boehne, sr., his father, when he was elected to Congress away back in 1909.

John, jr., was a boy of 14 when his dad first came to the House. And, like any boy of 14, he was thrilled with following his father on the floor and sitting in the seat alloted to a member of Congress.

So yesterday when Representative Boehne took the seat he won in an election in November, 1930, his own 10-year-old son, John W. Boehne 3d, accompanied him on the floor.

"Are you going to be a representative, too, when you grow up?" Everett Watkins, of the Indianapolis Star, asked John 3d.

"Sure," he replied.

And as to the promise made good. It seems Miss Heitmuller liked Washington pretty well when she married Mr. Boehne a dozen years ago. Having been born and raised here, she thought she would like to bring her children up in Washington, too. She told her husband.

"Some day," he promised, "I'm going to take you back there to live."

Yesterday he did.

The Boehnes, who live at 6311 Georgia street, Chevy Chase, Md., have two children now, 5-year-old Charles, and John 3d.

Mr. Boehne, sr., who served two terms in Congress following his election in 1909, was also in Washington yesterday. He accompanied his son and grandchildren on the floor, where the three generations took temporary possession before the gavel fell.

Mr. Boehne, sr., resigned after his second term in Congress. He is now a Class C director of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis.

Representative Boehne, jr., a Democrat, succeeds former Representative Harry E. Rowbottom, a Republican. He was in the stove manufacturing business before he took up politics.

I. C. C. PAVES WAY FOR RISE IN RAILROAD RATES AT ONCE

ber increase was $6 per car, the new increase will be 12 cents a ton.

Under the October decision all revenues derived from these increases were to be pooled for direct allocation to the weaker lines by the stronger.

Modification Made.

Under yesterday's modification each road is to be in control of its own revenues, but the I. C. C. said it relied on the carriers "to apply the funds to be derived from the authorized increases in rates in aid of financially weak railroads in accordance with the purposes expressed in our original report."

In their response to the I. C. C. on November 19 the carriers suggested establishment of a new administrative organization to be known as the Railroad Credit Corporation. Each participating carrier would report monthly on the amount of revenue derived from the emergency increases, and from the fund thus created the Credit Corporation would make their loans.

Under the articles of incorporation, which it is proposed to file in Delaware, the corporation will require adequate security for all its advances. But the directors of the corporation would be authorized "to relax this requirement when the public interest demands it."

Interest on the loans will be adjusted quarterly to conform to the Federal Reserve Bank's rate in New York.

Merely for the purposes of setting up the necessary corporate organization, the corporation will issue twelve shares of stock of $100 par value. These shares will be owned by twelve directors, five of whom shall come from the Eastern District, including one from New England; three from the Western District, two from the Southern District and one representative of the short lines. The twelfth, who shall be president of the corporation, is to be selected at large by the first eleven. The corporation may not pay a dividend.

Solvent Roads Eligible.

No carrier already in default on its fixed charges, or in the hands of receivers, will be eligible for loans from the Credit Corporation, but as regards all participating solvent roads the corporation will seek to use the fund to prevent defaults on debt charges. The loans would be made for a period not exceeding two years, and would be renewable for a like period.

Increases Authorized.

In its decision of October 16 rejecting the carriers petition for a horizontal increase of 15 per cent in all freight rates, the I. C. C. authorized increases of one cent per 100 pounds in refined petroleum products, brick, fertilizers and a long list of secondary agricultural products, including citrus fruits, melons, peanuts and vegetable oils.

Yesterday's modified increases of 6 cents a ton apply to coal and coke, mineral ores of all kinds, stone, gravel and lumber products. The increases of 12 cents a ton apply to crude petroleum, pig iron, scrap iron, asphalt, artifical stone and kindred products. The basic agricultural commodities are exempted from increases, but an increase of 2 cents per hundred pounds was authorized on all less-than-carload consignments.

Labor Officials Meet.

As the last obstacles were cleared from the path of the emergency rate relief plan, railroad labor officials met in Chicago yesterday to draw their rank-and-file answer to the proposal of the carriers for a general agreement on a ten per cent reduction in wages. Although the principal union executives rejected this plan in their New York conference with the executives two weeks ago, the railroads are moving forward individually with plans for prompt wage reductions.

It is expected here that although the labor officials at Chicago will express vigorous opposition to general wage adjustments, some revision will be made by each road through direct negotiation with its own employes.

Rail executives are convinced that as regards a great majority of their wage contracts acceptable adjustments can be negotiated without recourse to the involved and protracted processes of arbitration.

TOUGHEST GANGSTER OF CHICAGO CAUGHT

as his wife, and his body carted away for disposal. Lately, however, the gangland "underground telegraph" had sent word the gunman was still alive and well.

Police theorized, in October, that enemies had overtaken McErlane and his wife just after they had left their home for an overland automobile trip, killed her and the dogs, then kidnaped McErlane, after wounding him, and later killed him.

The day after the death of Mrs. McErlane, the body of John Quigley, veteran beer hustler and racketeer and a brother-in-law of Edward "Spike" O'Donnell, was found dumped in a roadside ditch south of Chicago. McErlane and O'Donnell had at one time been identified as beer partners, but police sought to link Quigley's death with McErlane's disappearance and the slaying of Mrs. McErlane, after hearing O'Donnell and McErlane had split.

McErlane was suspected early in 1930 of the slaying of John "Dingbat" Oberta and Sammy Malega, his chauffeur, who were found shot to death and their bodies thrown into a ditch.

BANKHEAD IS SEATED WITH QUIZ PENDING

Heflin Again Makes Charge Election Was Stolen; Bailey Takes Oath.

(Associated Press.)

Despite an informal report questioning the legality of his election, John H. Bankhead yesterday was sworn in as senator from Alabama.

He had been forced to stand aside for a few minutes, however, while Chairman Shortridge, of the elections committee, read the report submitted to him by Chairman Hastings of the subcommittee which has been considering the contest brought against Bankhead's election by former Senator Heflin.

Heflin had charged just a few minutes previously before the subcommittee that the election was "stolen" from him.

Joseph Bailey was administered the oath in the Senate as the new Democratic member from North Carolina.

Bailey's Seat Contested.

A contest against Bailey's election has been filed by his Republican opponent, George M. Pritchard, former representative. However, the Senate elections committee has not considered the contest pending receipt of funds for the study. Bailey took the seat of the veteran Furnifold M. Simmons, whom he defeated in the Democratic primary of 1930.

Bailey stood aside temporarily as Chairman Shortridge of the elections committee notified the Senate of the contest against him.

Heflin was on the floor and in Senate seat as Bankhead was given the right to the seat Heflin formerly occupied, pending disposition of the contest.

Hastings submitted the purely personal report in the Bankhead case just prior to the convening of Congress, so Shortridge could report to the Senate the status of the contest brought against Bankhead's election by former Senator Heflin.

Questions Listed.

Explaining it had been impossible for the subcommittee to make a formal report, Hastings listed four questions which he said some members of the subcommittee felt should be submitted to the full committee and the Senate.

They were:

"1. Whether the Alabama primary, which nominated Mr. Bankhead for the office of United States senator, was in violation of the laws of the State of Alabama and was therefore void, and if so, what effect that had upon the general election with respect to Mr. Bankhead.

"2. Whether Mr. Bankhead, according to his sworn statements, violated the Alabama law or the Federal law relative to expenditures and is thereby disqualified to hold the office.

"3. Whether the facts disclosed by the recount of the ballots show such a disregard of the election laws of Alabama by the election officials as to make it impossible for the Senate to ascertain a definite result.

"4. Whether, if the ballots that are tainted with law violations should be excluded from the count because of the opportunity offered for fraud in such violations, there would be sufficient valid ballots left to enable the Senate to ascertain the will of the electorate of Alabama."

Vote Totals Nearly Same.

Hastings said the mere tabulation of ballots by the subcommittee did not show any material change from the results announced by Alabama election officials, but the difficulty arose from discovery that election officers disregarded the election laws of Alabama.

He said out of a total of 2,043 boxes examined "not a single one could be found where the law had been fully complied with." He added:

"There were literally thousands of violations of the election laws.

"These were of such a chafacter that, in my judgment, they raise the serious question as to whether it can be said that there was a legal election of a United States senator in Alabama in 1930."

Death Sought for Kane; Trial Will Begin Today

Hampton, Va., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Commonwealth's Attorney Roland D. Cock indicated tonight that the State will ask the death penalty in the trial of Elisha Kent Kane 3d, charged with the drowning of his wife, Jenny Graham Kane, in Chesapeake Bay, last September.

The State's attorney said the prosecution will seek to prove murder of the first degree against the University of Tennessee professor in the trial beginning in the historic Elizabeth City County Courthouse here tomorrow. "If we prove our case, we shall certainly ask for the supreme penalty," Mr. Cock said.

Curry, Tammany Boss, Visits Speaker Garner

(Associated Press.)

John F. Curry, Tammany boss, renewed his acquaintanceship with Speaker Garner yesterday shortly after the Texan was elected to office. While the House was organizing, Curry was in the gallery. Afterward he went to Garner's office and was photographed wth the Speaker.

He also was introduced to Democratic members of the ways and means committee, on which Tammany has two places. This group makes up the slate of Democratic membership on all other committees. Garner and Curry met first at a breakfast about two weeks ago.

GARNER IS ELECTED SPEAKER AS CONGRESS OPENS SESSION

York, the Republican nominee for speaker.

When the roll was called yesterday, 433 members answered to their names. The full strength of the House is 435. There is one vacancy, that caused by the death of Fletcher Hale, a Republican, of New Hampshire. Yesterday one member, J. Will Taylor, a Republican, of Tennessee, was absent because of illness.

The vote on the Speakership was as follows:

Garner, 218; Snell, 207; George J. Schneider, of Wisconsin, 5; three answering present, these being Garner, Snell, and Schneider.

Those who voted for Schneider were Kvale (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota; and Amlie, Kaiding, Peavy, and Withrow, of Wisconsin.

Schneider Vote as Protest.

The quintet voted for Schneider as a protest against the Republican program. In advance they gave out their own program, one calling for greater relief for the unemployed and modification of the Volstead act.

Representative Snell couldn't have been elected even if the four Republicans and the Farmer-Laborite had voted for him. Even so, some of Snell's supporters were extremely angry over the defection of the four Republicans.

Representatives John Schafer, who once was regarded as a rampant liberal but who now is as conservative as Snell himself, had this to say about the independent Republicans afterward:

"Let them go to their candidate (Schneider) for their committee assignments."

If Schaefer was speaking with any authority at all, it might mean that the bolters will lose their present status with regard to committe assignments, which would be tantamount to reading them out of the party.

Garner Rides on Street Car.

Arising early yesterday, as is his custom, Speaker Garner, accompanied by Mrs. Ettie Garner, his wife and secretary, rode to the Capitol on a street car. "Our car," as Garner used to call the Speaker's official car when Nicholas Longworth had it, has been sold. A new one soon will be purchased for Garner.

The man who a few hours later was to be elected to an office that has been held by such notables as Henry Clay, James K. Polk, "Czar" Reed, "Uncle Joe" Cannon and "Nick" Longworth, wore what he called his "every-day" clothes—a brown suit, a soft collar with a nondescript tie and a pair of tan shoes. His head, of course, was covered by a tan, modified sombrero.

Mrs. Garner likewise wore a work costume.

When William Tyler Page, the clerk of the House, called the House to order, Garner was back by the cloakroom. He remained there while the Rev. Dr. James Shera Montgomery said the prayer, while the roll was being called and while the balloting for speaker was taking place.

Is Escorted to Chair.

It was not until the result had been announced and a committee of four had been appointed to escort him to the chair that the crowds in the gallery saw the little Texan.

He came down the middle aisle flanked by Representative Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, the new Democratic floor leader, and Representative Snell, and with Representative John Q. Tilson, of Connecticut, defeated candidate for the Republican speakership nomination, and Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, bringing up the rear.

Garner's face, always ruddy, was aflame as he marched toward the goal.

Meantime, the House was reverberating with rebel yells, Kleberg's cowboy yell, and the other varieties of shouts that a gathering of 200 or more men can loose.

Full Glare of Lights.

The Klieg lights, set up in the gallery of the photographers, cast a bright glare on Garner, and emphasized the plainness of his attire.

A greater emphasis was to be had by swinging the eyes from Garner to Representative Hartley, of New Jersey, sitting in the front row. In the last Congress, Hartley was the "baby member," and he may be in this one. Yesterday he was correct from his well-combed blond hair to his shiny, bespatted feet. He wore a formal morning costume, and across his waist was a gold chain supporting what appeared to be a medallion.

Representative Snell accompanied Garner to the Speaker's stand, and before presenting him with the gavel, made a brief, friendly speech.

"It is a pleasure," he said, "to present this gavel to you, the newly elected Speaker of the Seventy-second Congress.

Country Specially Favored.

"I have always been a firm believer in the party system of government and consider that country specially favored that has two strong, evenly divided political parties. Of course, from a personal standpoint, I might be willing to change somewhat the division that apparently exists at the present time.

"As I look over the long list of distinguished men who have occupied this high position—and there is no higher honor in the gift of any legislative body in the world—I find no one of these men has ever risen to the position of Speaker by mere luck or accident, but rather as the result of long, intelligent, efficient service and of undoubted, proven ability to perform the duties of this great office."

After paying tribute to Garner's native ability, his personality and his distinguished record, Snell handed him the gavel.

This was the signal for another outburst of cheering. Every single person on the Democratic side of the aisle, save one, stood up.

New Speaker Responds.

The man who failed to stand up was a cripple—Representative Joseph J. Mansfield, of Texas, who attends all sessions in a wheel chair. Chairbound though he was, however, Mansfield did his share in cheering his colleague.

Garner, in acknowledging the tribute, said:

"As many of you know, Mr. Snell and myself have known each other for many years, and I think I speak the sentiment of the older membership of the House, who have had association with him, when I say that he is one of the most dependable men that has ever been elected to this body. It will be a great pleasure for me to cooperate with him in the service of the country.

"Ordinarily, I would extend thanks to the entire House for my election to this high office, but unfortunately I did not get all the votes."

This brought a laugh.

"I am not unmindful of the responsibilities," he continued, "and with the cooperation of those who have expressed confidence in me—and I expect and hope also of the entire membership of the House—I hope to perform the duties of the office acceptably to all."

Garner Breaks Gavel Posing for Cameramen

(Associated Press.)

Speaker Garner broke his first gavel yesterday.

It was after the House, which promoted him to the chair, had adjourned. The Texan consented to pose for photographs and took a few practice whacks with a new gavel.

The handle snapped. It was made of mesquite wood and presented by friends in Texas. Garner plans to have it repaired.

Somebody thought there was going to be a lot of wear and tear on gavels in the House—the Capitol shop turned out half a dozen for the opening session.

But Mr. Garner had his ready to use, and Representative Snell, of New York, the Republican nominee for Speaker, had made no advance decision as to what gavel he would use if, by chance, elected.

Custom Is Broken In Senatorial Oaths

Neely, New West Virginia Senator, Not Escorted by Colleague.

(Associated Press.)

Senate custom was broken yesterday. West Virginia's new senator, M. M. Neely, was not escorted by his colleague when he walked up the Senate aisle to take his oath of office. Instead, Senator Pittman, of Nevada, another Democrat, walked with him Senator Hatfield defeated Neely in the 1928 election.

Usually senators are escorted up to take their oaths by the other senator from their State, regardless of party differences. Senator Hatfield, when asked about the instance, said he had never met Neely and, when he failed to mark him in the chambers, approached Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, to inquire for him. Hatfield said Robinson told him that Neely did not care for his escort. He said he had no idea why Neely had taken that attitude. Neely's office said he had no comment to make.

All 315 members of Parliament are progovernment. The opposition candidates refused to participate in a general election last November.

Wyoming U. Students Talk Strike.

Laramie, Wyo., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Talk of a student strike was heard on the University of Wyoming campus today when Dr. A. G. Crane, president of the institution, refused to apologize for peering into automobiles occupied by university student couples near a dance Friday night.

FULL DEBT PAYMENT URGED BY MFADDEN

Blames Industrial Situation on Loan of Too Much Money Abroad.

Alleging that one of the main causes of industrial stagantion in America has been the loan of too much money abroad, Representative Louis T. McFadden, chairman of the House committee on banking and currency, advocated full payment of war loans by European Nations in an address before the Bethesda, Md., Chamber of Commerce last night at the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School.

"From one extremity of this country to the other, commerce and industry are stagnane, agriculture is prostrate and business of all kinds, big and little, is disorganized; capital has suffered heavy losses, the wages of labor have been lowered, there is much unemployment and suffering and want are widespread. These conditions have prevailed more than two years," Mr. McFadden stated.

He declared that this country is a rich and fertile land, possessing almost every natural resources and with an intelligent and energetic population which has suffered no epidemic of disease or prostrating disaster of nature and which is not harassed by wars or fear of wars, capable of living and living well with no need of dependence on foreigners.

Admission of Banker.

"What, then, has suddenly brought this industrial paralysis throughout the land?" he asked. "A belated admission was made only a few weeks ago by one of our leading bankers who appeared before a congressional committee that we have loaned too much money abroad and that this is the major cause of the industrial stagnation. So it is causes coming from without and not those arising from within that we must examine if we would understand what has happened and know how to guard against it in the future," he said.

He charged that President Wilson "had been the victim of a clever camouflage of the real intentions of the allied nations to suck Germany dry and to make the United States pay the illegitimate war debt of Germany to the allies and then collect from Germany for a half century."

He charged that the allied supreme war council had deliberately thrust aside the treaty agreements with Germany and had forced that nation to agree to blood-sucker terms through a food blockade of which President Wilson was kept in ignorance and that American members of the reparations commission had deliberately failed to stand firm for the limitation of reparations principles of President Wilson and had ignored his orders to make public his stand if they could not obtain European acquiescence.

Asks About Pleas.

He asked if the allied nations meant that they will repudiate their debts unless they can first collect them from Germany or pass the collection on to America through the Young plan.

"When the European statesmen have divested themselves of the sickly dream of delivering a German slave-state to America for a price of billions in cash, the motive and purpose involved in the conception of German reparations will fall to the ground and the cancellation of the German reparations will logically follow. It is a sine qua non to the first steps toward a reconstruction of Europe.

"As to the allied debts to the United States, it has not been demonstrated that they can not pay these debts out of their own resources, for thus far they have not had to do so. The United States will remain a fair and just creditor. It is conceivable that in future years these governments, or some of them, may not be able to bear the weight of the debts, for the fortunes and resources of nations rise and fall.

Burden Can Be Lightened.

"In that case, the burden can be lightened or the debts cancelled but in our policy there should be no connection between them and the German reparations. This Franco-American agreement which Mr. Mellon and Mr. Edge negotiated at Paris last summer ought not to be ratified. Its rejection will serve the salutary end of making it plain to the governments of Europe that in orienting their policies for thirteen years upon the hope that America will pay for the war by buying the right to collect the German reparations, they have been following a will of the wisp; it will suggest to them the advisability of freeing themselves from the reparations hallucination and of readjusting their mutual financial relationships upon a basis of reality. And once for all, it will free American public policy and American private finance from association with the guilty intrigue of 1919 and from the moral degradation of a nearer association with the blood-raw peace," he declared.

Representative McFadden was introduced by Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business, who presided. Mr. Thorpe also spoke on the improvements in the Bethesda area which have been obtained through the initiative or cooperation of the chamber.

DAY IN CONGRESS

Monday, December 7.

SENATE.

Met at noon and adjourned until noon today.

Thirty newly elected and appointed senators were sworn into office.

Senator Shortridge (Republican), of California, chairman of the privileges and elections committee, announced that a subcommittee headed by Senator Hastings (Republican), of Delaware, had not finished investigation of charges filed by former Senator Heflin (Democrat), of Alabama, against the election of Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama. Senator Shortridge said he would offer resolution authorzing investigation of contest filed against seating of Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina.

Adopted formal resolutions incident to the convening of the first session of new Congress.

Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, questioned right of New Jersey Governor to appoint a successor to the late Senator Dwight W. Morrow, who had died before taking oath of office for the current senatorial term. Democrats named a committee of ten to act with a a similar House committee as a joint committee to develop the party's legislative program.

HOUSE.

Met at noon and adjourned at 2:25 p. m. until noon today.

William Tyler Page, clerk of the Seventy-first Congress, called the opening session of the Seventy-second Congress to order and called the roll, which showed a record-setting attendance of 433 members.

Elected John Nance Garner (Democrat), Texas, Speaker of the House by a vote of 218 against 207 votes for Bertrand H. Snell (Republican), New York, and 5 for George J. Schneider (Republican), Wisconsin; three members, Representative Garner, Representative Snell and Representative Schneider voting present.

Elected officers of the House selected by the Democrats, voting down a Republican proposal to retain old officers in their posts.

Elected Democratic membership of the ways and means committee, so that it might function as the party committee on committees.

Postponed consideration of Democratic proposal to liberalize House rules, with unanimous agreement to make rules the unfinished business on convening today.

Democrats named committee of ten to act with similar Senate committee as a joint committee to develop the party's legislative program.

Representative Arnold, of Illinois, chairman of Democratic caucus, announced election of Representative Rainey, of Illinois, as party floor leader.

Adopted resolutions expressing sorrow for the death of members of the House and formal resolutions incident to the convening of the Congress.

Several members announced their purpose to introduce measures dealing with prohibition, veterans' legislation, farm relief and other matters.

5,000 BILLS OFFERED FIRST DAY IN HOUSE

Include Prohibition, Farm Board, Banks, Veterans and Other Issues.

(Associated Press.)

Five thousand prospective laws were dumped yesterday into the legislative mill of the House.

The Senate will not be ready to receive bills until today at the earliest.

Despite these restrictions, however, some members talked of their proposals. A few of those on outstanding subjects in both branches were:

Prohibition: Nearly 100 suggested changes, including the legalizing of beer, ale, stout and light wines, and referenda on the eighteenth amendment; repeal of the eighteenth amendment; tightening up of enforcement.

Farm Board: Its abolishment with the transfer of its activities to the Agriculture Department; a further investigation.

Banks: To broaden the eligibility of acceptable paper; extend for two years loans made by Federal Land banks.

Veterans: Pay World War veterans compensation certificates in full; increase disability benefits; construction new hospitals; allow pensions to widows, orphans and dependents of World War veterans.

Public lands: One to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to collect fees for grazing on public lands in that State, by Leavitt, of Montana.

Cotton: To compel the Postoffice Department to use cotton instead of jute twine; provide that the Government use cotton wherever possible; place the New York Cotton Exchange under the jurisdiction of the Agricultural Department.

Unemployment: to establish a Federal board with $100,000,000 capital to function in times of depressions. Give insurance to unemployed.

Bills on taxes were few, both Democrats and Republicans waiting to see what President Hoover would recommend in his annual and budget messages.

In the Senate a proposal is pending for a full investigation of the railroad financial situation and in both branches the familiar Norris resolution calling for new meeting times of Congress and abolition of the "lame duck" sessions of old Congresses will be revived.

Jail Guard's Body Taken From River

John C. Steele, Employe at Lorton Workhouse, Is Drowned on Hunt.

The body of John C. Steele, guard at the District Workhouse at Lorton, Va., who was drowned while duck hunting Sunday night, was recovered from the Potomac River yesterday after grappling hooks had been brought from Washington.

Mr. Steele, who was 29 years old, went hunting in a small boat by himself. Shortly after dark cries were heard from the river, and searchers found the overturned boat. Attempts were made then to recover the body, but were discontinued owing to the darkness. No reason for the overturn of the skiff was advanced.

The drowning occurred at Centerstone, Va., which is near Occoquan Cries supposed to have been made by Steele were heard by Lindsay Dawson, who went out in his motor boat to investigate. Mr. Dawson found the capsized boat.

Civic Graft Inquiry Opened in Chicago

Frst of 1,100 Witnesses in $5,000,000 Fraud Quiz Goes on Stand.

Chicago, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Lucrative contracts gained with the influence of whisky, millions in supplies bought without competitive bidding, singers and dancers and ball players on the sanitary district payrool for nothing more than singing and dancing and playing ball—these were charges presented to three criminal court judges today.

John E. Northrup, the special prosecutor who brought eight former sanitary district officials to trial after two years investigation and skirmishes in the courts, sketched the divers trails taken by five million alleged misspent dollars.

The prosecution put the first of its 1,1000 witnesses on the stand.

Legal Snag Struck In Blue Laws' Test

High Court Sends Virginia Case Back for Ruling on Jurisdiction.

(Associated Press.)

An order denying a concern operating a miniature golf course in Richmond, Va., an injunction against a Sunday blue law was affirmed by the Supreme Court yesterday but the court did not pass in any way on the merits of the issues presented.

The court passed only on the technicalities involved, and sent the case back to a three-judge Federal Court for that body to pass on the question of jurisdiction. If that court should decide Federal courts have jurisdiction, the case may come back to the Supreme Court again.

The Broad Grade Arcade Corporation, of Richmond, which operates a miniature golf course, attacked a decision that it had violated the Sunday law in operating on the Sabbath. The corporation said the law was vague, since it was left to a jury to decide what work was necesasry or proper on the Sabbath. All labor, save "necessary" work and household and charitable activities, is banned on Sunday under the Virginia statute.

Mrs. Caraway Is Planning To Carry on 'Dad's' Work

First Working Woman Senator Avoids First Session, Where Death of Her Husband Is Formally Announced; to Take Oath Today.

(United Press.)

Mrs. Hattie Caraway, first working woman senator, is going to try to "carry on just like dad would have wanted me to."

She fought to keep back the tears as she said it yesterday in her first interview with 24 members of the press. She received them in her office, where she had sat with friends while the Senate was holding its first session. Mrs. Caraway will take her oath of office today. She felt it would be too much of an ordeal to attend yesterday's session, where the death of her husband was formally announced.

"I guess I had better stand," she murmured as the reporters filed into the room. She placed her hands on her desk and faced the group, composed mostly of women. She wore a plain mourning dress, unadorned.

"What committee assignments are you going to get?" she was asked first.

"They haven't told me yet," Mrs. Caraway replied.

Likes Title of "Mrs."

"What do you like to be called—Senator Caraway, Mrs. Senator or Senatress?"

"I like to be called Mrs. Caraway," she replied as she tossed her head and her eyes showed signs of tears. "That is the best title I could have."

The bills she will introduce are those "Dad had intended to introduce" before he died. They are personal bills for the relief of individuals in Arkansas.

"I have not given any thought to any general measures," she explained.

Pet hobbies? She had none. The question of whether women of her State would feel more free to approach her than the late senator had not struck her at all, she said. A girl reporter explained the senator had always stood well with the women of the State.

"Dad always responded to requests, no matter who they came from," Mrs. Caraway said.

The absence of curtains in her office was mentioned. She guessed she would have to get some. A secretary explained her first observation this morning was that the windows were not washed.

She had not thought of spending much time on the Senate floor and did not know whether she would make many speeches.

Will Remain Careful.

"I have been very careful in talking about legislation before," she explained. "I think I will have a still stronger curb on my tongue now. I could not make any promises. People often speak from impluse."

A girl reporter pointed out that women in the House felt they would have to be very careful because the eyes of the women of the country were on them. She asked if Mrs. Caraway felt the same way.

"I do not know that I will feel I have to be very careful," Mrs. Caraway replied. "I feel I will have to do my best."

A friend broke into the group and presented a bunch of violets.

Home Town's Celebration Hails Election of Garner

Uvalde, Tex., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—News of the election today of Representative John Nance Garner to the Speakership of the House of Representatives was the signal in his home town here for a general celebration.

Scores of congratulatory messages were sent to Washington and the Uvalde Band paraded through the streets.

The climax of the celebration was planned tonight at a public meeting. The program included the reading of a review of Garner's life and what he has done for the Fifteenth Texas District.

(Associated Press.)

Representative Garner remembered his friends down in Texas yesterday when he was elected Speaker in the following message:

"In this hour of triumph for the Democratic party in organization of the House, I desire to convey to the people of south Texas my deep appreciation of the confidence, support and loyalty they have tendered me for almost thirty years. I assure you that as the representative of the Fifteenth District of Texas my services are always at your command.

"I am only human and I deeply appreciate the honor my Democratic colleagues have conferred upon me by electing me Speaker, but deeper in my heart lies that appreciation of the confidence and support which for thirty years the people of the Fifteenth District have tendered me.

"It was this confidence and support that made my elevation to the Speakership possible."

NEW BANKING FIRM FORMED IN CAPITAL

Folger and Nolan Will Deal in General Investments; Offices Opened.

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Announcement was made yesterday of the formation of a new investment banking firm in this city under the name of Folger, Nolan & Co., Inc., members of the firm being Clifford Folger and James Parker Nolan.

The firm's offices were opened yesterday in rooms 507-508 of the American Security Building at 728 Fifteenth street northwest. The office suite has been especally arranged and complete facilities for this type of business are being installed.

Mr. Folger has been engaged in the bond business in Washington for the past three years, having been vice president of D. H. McKnew & Co. prior to the formation of the new firm. He came to Washington from Rochester, N. Y., where he was engaged in business for a number of years. He is a native of the State of Washington and a graduate of the Washington State College.

Nolan Is Washingtonian.

Mr. Nolan, a native of Washington, D. C., attended Georgetown Law School. After college he entered the State Department and in 1924 became identified with the National City Co. For the past seven years he has been engaged in the bond business in this city. He is one of the governors of the Bond Club of Washington.

Folger, Nolan & Co. will engage in a general investment banking business. Their office is conveniently located in the downtown financial section. Their out-of-town connection is with the firm of Kidder, Peabody & Co., of New York and Boston and New York clearance will be made through that house. Kidder, Peabody & Co. was organized in 1865 and is one of the oldest financial houses in New York and New England.

With Federal, State and local government expenditures increasing at a tremendous rate, the mounting burdens of taxation constitute a serious menace to the future prosperity of business," says Henry H. Heimann, executive manager of the National Association of Credit Men, in his monthly review of business sent to the association's 25,000 members, here and elsewhere.

Year's Combined Expenditures.

"It is estimated these combined expenditures this year may well run to $15,000,000,000, which would be approximately five times our total expenditures of 15 years ago," the credit chief explains. "Deflation in Government is a difficult thing, yet highly essential. Private industry has had to deflate during the depression, and it is time that there be an organized effort to bring about a corresponding deflation in government. It is estimated that one dollar out of every nine of the income of the United States goes to the expense of government.

Although prices are depressed, the credit chief explains that "it is well to bear in mind that while production is at low ebb, consumption has not fallen to the same extent. When we consume more than we produce the length of time required for the resumption of production is constantly shortened and it is a favorable indication that the wheels of industry must soon again begin to turn to satisfy consumptive wants.

"We emerge from depressions usually through some outstanding favorable development in certain lines. It was building industry and automobile production that brought us out of the last depression. Perhaps we shall emerge from this depression under the leadership of a price improvement in certain commodities, an unexpected pick-up in residential building, and a favorable turn in the automobile industry."

Department Store Sales.

While October department store retail trade in all cities of the Fifth Federal Reserve District fell behind that of the month last year, local sales showed the slightest recesson. According to the review of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, Washington sales were 5.6 per cent under those of the month a year ago, but Richmond sales were 15.3 per cent off, those of Baltimore 14.6 per cent, those of other cities 18.5 per cent. The Reserve district's average was 11.6 per cent below that of the month in 1930.

Compared wth the first ten months of 1930, Washington is the only city showing a gain, its sales being .03 per cent ahead for this year's comparative period. For the period, Richmond sales showed a 7.4 per cent decline, Baltimore a 6.3 per cent decrease, other cities a 13.5 per cent loss, and the Reserve district average was 4.8 per cent behind.

Distributions for the six-month period ending December 31 of 15.6 cents a share of Fundamental Trust Shares Series A and of 30 cents a share of Fundamental Trust Shares Series B, of which 14.637 cents a share will be withdrawn from the reserve fund, has been announced by Fundamental Group Corporation, depositor.

Bucharest, Roumania, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—The marriage of Prince Nicholas, brother of King Carol, to Mlle. Lucia Deletj, a commoner, was annulled today by the Bucharest District Court, which ruled that a prince marrying without royal consent automatically loses his rights as a member of the royal house.

The court decision voiding the marriage was on the ground that the mayor who married the couple after an elopement from Bucharest was not authorized to act.

Church Usher, 16, Ends Life To Evade Burglary Arrest

Three Other Massachusetts Lads Held as Boy Commits Suicide in Woods When Police Close in After Chase.

Sandwich, Mass., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—A 16-year-old boy church usher who had been under police scrutiny since a burglary in Nantucket November 27 was dead today, a suicide. Two other boys were in the hands of police here and a fourth youth was under arrest in Nantucket.

The boy who the police said shot himself last night was Frederick Charles Smith, of Nantucket, 16. In police custody today were Eloi Legere, 14, and Stanley Comeau, 16, who left Nantucket with Smith yesterday aboard a steamer.

Police, who had made no charges in connection with a $158 chain grocery store burglary November 27, learned that the trio had sailed and asked Falmouth police to meet tthe boat at Woods Hole.

Legere was arrested at the dock, but Smith and Comeau eluded the policeman who met the boat. Subsequently, police said, the pair stole an automobile and after going 2 miles abandoned the car and took to the woods.

Policemen who had given chase located the boys and one of the officers flashed a light he carried on Smith and called upon him to surrender. Instead, the officer said, the boy drew an automatic pistol, pressed it to his heart and fired.

The Comeau boy was not captured until today, when he was found near Sandwich. Police said the Legere boy, taken back to Nantucket today, denied any connection with the store robbery, but said his companion had committed the burglary and had invited him yesterday on a trip to the mainland.

According to word received from Nantucket today, Ralph Hammond, 16, was arrested there and arraigned in district court on a charge of larceny in connection with the store burglary, and his case was continued until tomorrow.

Attendants at the church services where Smith passed the collection plate yesterday recalled that young Smith apparently carried a pistol or revolver in his pocket at the time.

FASCIST SECRETARY QUITS AFTER BREACH

Giuriati Will Transfer His Authority to Starace at Palace Today.

Rome, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Offered up as a sacrifice on the altar of church and state amity, Giovanni Giuriati resigned today as secretary of the Fascist party.

He will transfer his authority as the second most powerful figure in the black-shirt movement to Achille Starace, vice secretary of the party, in a brief ceremony at the Venezia Palace tomorrow noon.

An official announcement praised Signor Giuriati for his labors in "purifying" the party and stated he was permitted to resign only after great insistence on his part.

"The head of the government, while regretting Giuriati's request, accepts it," the communique said.

Father Rosa Removed.

Yet, it was recalled that when Premier Mussolini and Pope Pius XI reached an accord in September on the Catholic action controversy each demanded and agreed to the sacrifice of the most active disputant on each side. Father Enrico Rosa was removed as head of the Catholic publishing house and the resignation of Signor Giuriati was predicted.

The Fascist secretary had caused an open breach between the government and the Vatican by an address in which he accused Catholic Action of trespassing in political fields. The Pope sharply criticized his remarks and also held him responsible for the sacking of Catholic clubs in Rome.

Resignation Was Delayed.

The resignation would have been given out earlier, it was believed, but was postponed in order that it might not appear to be a definite surrender to the papal request and also to see how the September agreement would work out.

Signor Giuriati, a participant in the Fiume expedition and an early follower of Mussolini, has held the secretaryship for fourteen months. He will continue as president of the Chamber of Deputies.

Signor Starace is 42 years old and has been vice secretary since 1921. He was leader of the Venice and Trento sections of the Fascist march on Rome in 1922. He is parliamentary deputy from Apulia and holds the rank of lieutenant general in the Fascist militia.

AS CONGRESS OPENS.

The Democratic party yesterday obtained control of the House of Representatives and elected John N. Garner Speaker. The two houses of Congress are organized and will listen today to the annual message of the President.

It is generally known that President Hoover will devote the major part of his message to the economic situation, including Federal finances, and it is expected that he will make several recommendations of paramount importance, looking to speedy amelioration of present conditions.

The public is also prepared to learn from Mr. Hoover that a temporary increase in taxation is necessary. The state of the Treasury is fairly well known, and all the details will be spread before the country in the budget message. A large deficit exists, extraordinary expenditures for veterans and public works for unemployment relief must be provided, and steps must be taken to prevent excessive increase in the public debt. Therefore taxes must be levied.

Second-rate politicians believe that it is never wise to propose taxation on the eve of an election. Their idea is that it is better to fool the people than to run the risk of their displeasure over higher taxes. But President Hoover is not animated by political motives in dealing with this emergency. The fact that he advocates an increase in taxation is sufficient to show that he proposes to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth to his countrymen, leaving it for them to decide whether or not he is acting in their interest. If he is, and if his showing is such as to convince them that he has done and is doing all that man can do to combat the tremendous adverse forces that are demoralizing the world, the people are likely to rally to his support and call upon Congress to back him up in his efforts.

No credit will be gained by politicians in either party in Congress in an attempt to make the economic depression a political issue. It is not a Republican or Democratic depression, nor even an American depression. It is a world-wide stroke of bad fortune, which has hit many foreign countries much harder than it has hit the United States. The chief power house of energy, resource, initiative, and courage is the United States. This country will recover from the misfortune more quickly than any other country. In bringing about its own recovery it will be contributing in the most effective manner to the recovery of other countries. United action by men of all parties in this country is the most promising means of restoring world welfare.

Speaker Garner and his party colleagues have a wonderful opportunity to promote the cause of the Democratic party by promoting the welfare of the United States. They need not abate a jot of political independence in cooperating with the President and the Republican party in the nonpartisan task of restoring good times. Men of their party will share in the benefits.

The country is very skeptical as Congress meets. So many politicians have tried to twist the depression to their political advantage that the public fears the whole membership will prefer partisan trickery to statesmanslike cooperation. There is no hope that insurgent Republicans will quit their trickery for the sake of the public welfare, but there is a strong hope that, with the Democratic party responsible for one branch of Congress, that party will put statesmanship above partisanship, if only for reasons of enlightened self-interest. If the Democratic party should contribute powerfully to a solution of the country's problems, with an eye to the public welfare, it need not fear that the people will refuse to give it credit for its share of the work.

There will be glory enough for all if Congress acts promptly and adequately in this national emergency. There will be no glory for anybody if Congress should fail. Public disgust will exclaim "A plague on both your houses," and many a faithful legislator will feel the lash which will be applied to the entire Congress, and to both parties.

RESULTS OF EXTRAVAGANCE.

Members of Congress can not fail to be impressed by the Treasury's announcement that notes and certificates of indebtedness, amounting to $1,300,000,000, must be issued to meet the Government's obligations. A large part of this sum will be used to retire notes and certificates which mature on December 15, but nearly one-fourth of the total must be used for interest on the public debt and to meet current expenditures.

The result of these issues will be to increase the public debt about $300,000,000, bringing it to a total of $17,600,000,000. The increase in the short-term debt will be almost as large. This is a graphic reminder to Congress of its extravagance during the last session. At the same time it is a warning that wild adventures with public funds at the present session will fall with a heavy blow upon the shoulders of taxpayers.

When Congress was doling out money for the soldiers' bonus, drought relief loans and various other abnormal expenditures it was argued that money was cheap—that the Treasury could borrow ample funds at low interest rates without imposing hardships upon taxpayers. In June when the Treasury marketed $800,000,000 in long-term bonds at 3½ per cent interest there was a fresh outpouring of this prattle. But the Treasury was able to take advantage of low interest charges only once. Its present issue of one-year Treasury notes will bear higher interest than did the long-term bonds marketed six months ago. Money is no longer cheap. The very fact that the Government has been forced to sell an abnormal amount of bonds during the last year has stiffened interest rates, thus raising the cost to taxpayers of financing the Government in these difficult times.

Present circumstances show that the Treasury was sagacious in offering long-term bond issues at low interest rates in June and September. In spite of the heavy burden that was handed to Secretary Mellon by Congress last winter, the Treasury has conducted its financing with the utmost caution coupled with admirable foresight. Its present policy of issuing only short-term notes and certificates is calculated to postpone a new long-term bond issue until it can be marketed at more favorable rates without draining capital from legitimate business enterprises.

Secretary Mellon warned Congress a year ago of what might be expected from the reckless distribution of gratuities from the Treasury. But the warning fell upon deaf ears. Congress must now face the music and raise taxes to pay for its own extravagance. The consequences of last year's derelictions should have a sobering effect upon members during this session.

TO HELP SOFT COAL.

A conference of bituminous coal operators just terminated in New York has reached agreement to support a stabilization plan for betterment of conditions in the industry. This is cheering news regarding a most important branch of national production which has been in a thoroughly demoralized state for several years, both as to prices realized by operators and wages received by the miners. Proposed measures appear simple and practical enough to be put into operation promptly.

Steps are to be taken in each of the twenty soft coal districts to form regional or district sales agencies to handle the sale of all coal in each territory. This marketing plan is urged in order to do away with the "cut-throat competition" among hundreds of operators who are selling at different prices. The output of each district will be sold at a price fixed by the regional sales committee.

Prices for bituminous coal during recent years have reached such low levels, so near the actual cost of production, that in the severe competition to secure business, small mines and those with obsolete equipment found no means of reducing costs except by cutting wages. This practice is responsible for the lamentable conditions in many mining sections where labor is unable to realize earnings sufficient to provide decent living conditions.

The meeting of operators further urged the necessity of effecting the merger or physical consolidation of coal properties in various districts that are now producing through a multitude of small organizations and individual mines. Such mergers would not only reduce management and overhead charges, but greatly facilitate marketing and price regulation, and the operators are of the opinion that consolidations along natural and economic lines will be the most practical step possible for the benefit of every element connected with the coal industry.

Bituminous coal supplies more than half of all the energy produced in the United States. Even with the reduced output this year over 400,000,000 tons will be mined. An army of more than 500,000 miners is dependent upon the industry for a living. Many miners today are in dire straits, and measures for improvement of conditions such as are now proposed will be welcomed as beneficial to the entire economic life of the Nation.

DEFECTIVE JURIES.

Attorney General Mitchell calls attention to a serious defect in the criminal law of the District—the disqualification of grand juries for petty reasons—and asks Congress to remedy it. In recent years a large number of indictments have been invalidated because defense attorneys have found one member of several grand juries to be technically ineligible for such service. Waste of time and money besides frequent miscarriage of justice results from such haphazard procedure.

Care should be exercised to see that ineligible members are not allowed to serve on grand juries. But that does not always prevent men who are beyond the age limit, or who are disqualified for some other minor reason, from serving. Attorney General Mitchell takes the position that occasional mistakes in this regard are inevitable and, therefore, he suggests that the law be amended so that indictments will stand if not less than twelve qualified grand jurors vote for them. This would satisfy the constitutional provision. Extra grand jurymen could then be chosen in each case to guard against the possible disqualification of one member.

Representative Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, has prepared a bill on this subject and will seek to bring it to the attention of Congress at an early date. His plan differs from that of Attorney General Mitchell in that it would permit no disqualification of grand jurymen after they were sworn, unless objection had been raised previously, or unless the defendant in question had been indicted for a crime committed after the impaneling of the jury. The plan recommended by Attorney General Mitchell seems to be less complicated and more direct. It is to be hoped that the judiciary committees of the Senate and the House will study the question from every angle and adopt a satisfactory measure at the present session.

At the same time Congress ought to look into the methods of selecting citizens for jury service in the District. The nature of the District's population, the absence of poll lists and the many grounds of ineligibility make it extremely difficult to choose competent jurors in Washington. Since juries are the backbone of the system by which justice is administered in the United States, improvement in the quality of jurors chosen is of the foremost importance.

The Lenz-Culbertson bridge game has been termed "the battle of the century." But to us it is just another fight over bids for the contract.

President Hoover will have a great laugh when he is informed by a congressional committee that Congress is ready for business.

If we had a Government breadline some members of Congress would be busy trying to get a place in it for members of their family.

Simultaneous with the arrival of the "hunger army," a local movie started a new film entitled "Are These Our Children?"

THE CORPORATION TAX

By SAMUEL RUSSELL.

The preliminary figures just made public for 1930 indicate that the Bureau of Internal Revenue in this slump year laid out $8,250,000 to audit the tax returns of 231,287 corporations with $41,144,687,859 of corporate receipts which did not pay a dollar of Federal taxes—not even a dollar to contribute to the cost of auditing these returns.

This egregious tax-free corporate income is more than threefold the total personal income of $13,306,750,604 reported for 1930 by 1,946,625 taxable individual returns.

The annual operating cost of the Bureau of Internal Revenue is $34,000,000, and it is estimated that the handling of 500,000 corporate returns takes up $20,000,000 of this amount.

That these deficit corporations are, to paraphrase the vernacular, "getting away with grand larceny," is a fact that does not seem to be within the consciousness of Congress or of the Government tax specialists who are making assiduous studies to discover new dollar sources for Federal revenue.

As to how this twoscore and more billions of tax-free corporate dollar receipts were distributed is not made public in the preliminary statistics for 1930.

But the complete statistics for 1929, which have likewise just become public, indicates that deficit corporations in that year, with total nontaxed corporate receipts of $31,093,375,359, distributed $2,757,703,101 to directors and security holders and allocated $827,406,528 to depreciation and depletion funds. This situation suggests pointedly that these corporations and, indeed, all corporations, should pay a business duty on corporate dollar receipts and should not distribute their profits to directors, bondholders, shareholders and reserves until after the Government duty has been paid.

If corporate trade receipts are laid under a 1 per cent duty, personal and partnership trade receipts should likewise be subject to the 1 per cent tax.

If personal incomes become taxed at a rate which contains a thousandth of a mill for each dollar in the income upon which the tax is to be computed, the tax on a personal income of $10,000 will be 10 mills, or 1 per cent, which means that the taxpayer whose income reaches the $10,000 level should be permitted to separate his trade income from his general income, and pay the same 1 per cent duty on his trade receipts that is charged on corporate trade receipts. This will permit the repeal of general business deductions from personal income as well as the repeal of all special deductions, personal exemptions, earned income and other credits, which must be done if the normal tax is abolished and the graduated surtax becomes rationalized and extended to cover the whole personal income tax field.

In 1930 total corporate receipts reported by 498,110 corporations were $120,291,711,677, upon which, even in this slump year, a 1 per cent duty would have yielded revenues at the rate of $100,000,000 per month. The corporation tax actually collected was $618,246,431, which represents roundly a duty of but half of 1 per cent on the total corporate receipts reported.

The structure of the existing corporate profits tax should be corrected whether the tax remains as the main corporate tax or is retained as a supplement to the proposed business duty of 1 per cent on corporate receipts.

Corporate dividends and interest merged in the income of individuals pay surtax. Corporations should accordingly pay the income tax before they distribute interest, just as they pay the income tax before they distribute dividends. This reform alone would permit the present corporate tax to be cut from 12 to 10 per cent and would otherwise equalize the tax between corporations, without respect to the form of their capital issues. Depreciation accounts should be closed, and in lieu theerof, the corporation should be allowed to deduct in full, as and when made, all expenditures in the proper scope and course of the corporate business without distinction as between capital and maintenance expenditures.

Depletion accounts should be abolished, and in lieu thereof, the corporation should be allowed an arbitrary deduction of 20 per cent of the dollar sales returned of oil, coal, ores, minerals and timber as and for the cost of the sold materials in place.

The tax on capital gains should be abolished. The business duty on gross receipts will operate as a sales tax on capital conversions.

These three things—depreciation, depletion and capital gains—all of which have controversial valuation bases, have been the principal causes that required Congress to appropriate in the fiscal years from 1916 to 1932, inclusive, the astounding sum of $1,372,000,000 as refund taxes collected because of the administrative mistakes of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The original income revenue act of 1913 was crude in both conception and formulation. The revenue act was revised and reenacted in 1916, in 1917, in 1918, in 1921, in 1924, in 1926 and in 1928. The final result is 104 pages of cross-indexed, enumerated and alphabeticated complications.

The case calls for some major legislative surgery.

The Smallest Stone in a Building Helps to Lift the Tower Higher.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

NATURE is prolific and prodigal.

Millions of eggs, millions of seed, millions of germs of life are provided where only one is needed.

The one that survives may be the strongest, or chance alone may preserve it. In any case it lives to perpetuate its kind and the others die unused.

That, in brief, is the story of mankind.

The plan of the universe is one of endless development. Everywhere and always there is growth.

Explain the origin of our solar system and the origin of man as you will, this much is agreed upon by all men of science—that the earth was hot and became cool; that it was barren and produced green things; that living creatures changed and developed to meet changing conditions; that man himself, moving on through countless centuries, slowly but surely draws nearer to an ideal.

Read history or study nature and you find the story of progress—the working of a plan that has system and order. And all things fit together and work together, each one somehow aiding the other to live, as generation follows generation and the plan unfolds.

It is, quite obviously, the plan of an infinite and omnipotent intelligence.

The Bible says: "God created." But there is no past or future with God, or in reality. Time is an invention of man to measure his own brief existence. In the infinite present tense, that has no beginning or ending, God still is creating the earth—still is creating man to be in His own image.

You are a part of the plan that will at last result in man's perfection.

But as millions of seed are wasted while only one is used, so it may be that thousands or millions of men live and die without advancing the plan.

It does not follow that men called great by the world are the useful ones. The conqueror and the builder may interfere with the plan, while some obscure and humble man who counts himself a failure may father sons and daughters who will move the whole race forward.

And you, whether great or small by the world's measurement, may speak a word or set an example that will influence life after life through many generations.

The seed plays its part as directed by chance. You may serve as you will. And though you count yourself a failure, it is no small honor to be a unit of the plan that is creating man in the image of his Maker.

Press Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great American Show, "Politics."

Dawes Not in Politics.

Boston Transcript.

Washington reports a group of Republican senators who are hoping they can induce Charles G. Dawes, Ambassador to Great Britain, to run for the presidential nomination against Mr. Hoover. Like the movement to "draft Coolidge," this effort is likely to make little headway. Indeed, it may be doubted if Gen. Dawes would be tempted to enter politics again even if Mr. Hoover were not to be on the ticket, for he has told some of his intimate friends that he has been cured of any desire for elective office and never would run for anything again; and his reported remark in Paris the other day that he is not in politics and is "not going in" confirms what has been the understanding on this side of the water for some time. We can understand, however, the impulses back of the so-called Dawes movement, for the ambassador is very popular in the West and his neighbors and friends would delight to honor him in any way possible. President Hoover will not lack for rivals in the presidential field, but whether any of them will enter the national convention with enough delegates behind them to make their candidacies impressive is another story. In any event, we feel warranted in assuming that Gen. Dawes will not be one of them.

Curtis as Running Mate.

Hartford Courant.

Observers of politics have attached considerable importance to the decision of Mr. Curtis, arguing that if he abandoned his place on the national ticket, his action would mean that, in his opinion, its prospects of winning are not bright. His decision to stand by the ship consequently may be regarded as a "break" for Mr. Hoover, provided he desires Mr. Curtis once more as a running mate. Although Presidents are almost invariably renominated, Vice Presidents almost invariably are not, for the second place on the ticket can be used advantageously to placate disaffected sections. In 1928 Mr. Curtis was given the place to gratify the Middle West. If the hope existed that he might enable the Republicans to nominate an Easterner next year, preferably an opponent of prohibition, it now seems doomed, for to refuse him the nomination now that he has made plain that he wants it would create a situation to be avoided. No Vice President has taken greater joy in the office than Mr. Curtis. The general feeling among Republicans doubtless will be to let him take his chance at winning it again.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

"Federalist" Moralizes on Taxpaying, and Holds Cheerful Giving to Be Patriotic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the coming session of Congress there will be much talk about taxation, a considerable portion of which will be crude or demagogic. Some will insist on "soaking the rich," and others will favor a sales tax on luxuries. Those with a statesman-like view of the future will be influenced by the idea that, for the healthy functioning of government, all classes of our citizenship should pay their fair share of taxes to keep the Treasury solvent.

It is a very perplexing anomaly of free institutions that the average citizen, whether poor or rich, pays his taxes without any glow of satisfaction and too often grudgingly.

In his "Civil Government in the United States," John Fiske says:

"When the highwayman points his pistol at me and I hand him my watch and purse, I am robbed. But when I pay the tax collector, who can seize my watch or sell my house over my head if I refuse, I am simply paying what is fairly due from me toward supporting the Government."

Too many taxpayers fail to clearly see this distinction, and seem to have a feeling of being robbed when called upon to contribute a comparatively small amount to the governmental upkeep.

During this trying, but at the same time enlightening, season of depression, is a good time for our taxpayers to take a patriotic view of the subject and make up their minds to set down the tax bills as the most important item in their yearly budget. This can, in the majority of cases, be done without serious detriment to their standard of living by slight cuts in expenditures for gasoline, moving pictures, midnight suppers and other incidental "necessaries" of modern life.

Certainly we will never reach the high ideal for which we hope until it is fully realized that the true patriot is one who feels more satisfaction and not less pride in paying his taxes than in shedding his blood for his country.

FEDERALIST.

Citizens Need Reminder That Taxpaying Is a Political Duty.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I hope my view of the subject of taxation will not seem to simple-minded to appear in print. It is a common stunt of editors and other highbrow molders of opinion to become indignant over the demagogism of those politicians who proclaim that the best and proper way to raise the wherewithal to keep the wheels of government going is to soak the rich and spare those of ordinary means. It would be a good deal more to the purpose to berate the great mass of citizens who refuse to accept the chief responsibility of citizenship, which is the payment of taxes. In other words, the tax-raising demagogues simply reflect the state of mind of their constituents. We are far away from the Dark Ages when taxation was to a great extent robbery of the poor, and what is needed is a campaign of education to teach Mr. Average Citizen that his niggardly prejudice against the tax collector is uncivilized. He should be made to feel that in the progress of government the political duty of taxpaying is not less important than the religious duty of cheerful giving.

Spring i' the Air? "Box Seat" Smells Victory for Griffmen, If——

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent sporting page headline, "Nats Trade Hadley, Jones and Hayes to White Sox," woke me up like the first chirp of the bluebird in the spring. Carl Reynolds and Jack Kerr, who come to Washington in exchange for the Nat trio, there is good reason to think will add strength to the Washington line-up, the former being not only a regular flyhawk, but a natural-born extra-base hitter. The fact that he slugs right-handed does not make much difference to me. His power to drive in runs is what counts.

With Reynolds in right field, or in left field, if Heinie Manush fails to get rid of his safe-bunt complex, our outfield during the coming season may be expected to give our fine pitching staff the pennant-winning support it didn't get last year. In that case the Griff Stadium will be rocked by the uproarious fans as seldom since 1925, and Griff will once again have furnished us an example of why he's called the "Old Fox."

PLAYING FATHER.

I notice when they're playing house,
Miss Janet wants to be
The mother in the flowing gown to sit and serve the tea,
And always there's an argument that endless seems to run,
No child likes playing father, for it isn't any fun!

Now one will be the servant girl, and one will be the nurse,
And very gravely day by day these roles will they rehearse,
But when they come to settle which will play the father's part,
As sure as I am telling tales a quarrel's bound to start.

It seems these little mimics, aping grown-ups ways and airs,
Have learned that it is father who must carry in the chairs,
It's father who must do the work and all the errands run,
And if they make you be the man
you can't have any fun.

I chuckle as I watch them, with Miss
Janet pouring tea
And giving orders to the child who's imitating me.
I love this childish drama, but I'd tell 'em every one,
That after all their father really has a lot of fun!

WATERWAYS BUDGET IS BEFORE CONGRESS

Cut by One-Fifth, Estimate Calls for $60,000,000 for Year's Work.

(Associated Press.)

Reduced by one-fifth from their original figure, the estimates of money needed for river and harbor work during the next fiscal year came to Congress yesterday calling for $60,000,000.

Fifteen million dollars were removed from the original $75,000,000 reqquest that Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown sent to the Budget Bureau.

Most of the individual projects of the country will be curtailed a little to accomplish the reduction. Gen. Brown, in meeting the demand of the Budget Bureau to lower the total, trimmed most of the activities. Army engineers, however, expect lower costs of labor and materials to make up about half of the amount sliced.

Flood Control Work.

For flood control work, which is separate from rivers and harbors, the engineers asked $35,000,000, $3,000,000 less than was given for this fiscal year. The Budget Bureau trimmed the figure to $32,000,000 with which Army engineers said they could accomplish the work that had been assigned to the next fiscal year under the 10-year program.

The total that came to Congress for river and harbor work was the same as allocated for this year. The figures arrived on Capitol Hill before the Senate and House had time to get down to business, and were set aside to await their turn before the House appropriations committee that must yet be organized.

Rarely are these estimates underappropriated. The last Congress' river and harbor appropriations exceed $80,000,000 for the current year.

Gen. Brown, busy chief of vast Army engineering projects, submitted the figures on what he could use profitably in the fiscal year beginning next July 1 on plans it is estimated will cost $210,951,675 to complete.

Quotes Statistics.

To sustain his position, he said that these harbors and waterways which dot the country's coast lines and embrace its inland rivers and lakes bore 1,107,842,523 tons of commerce in 1930. Already they have cost the nation $888,259,919.

For the great inland waterways, including the Mississippi River system and the Illinois, Missouri, Ohio and lesser systems, Brown asked $25,431,500. For Atlantic Coast harbors and channels he wanted $10,835,100; for the Pacific Coast, $4,514,950.

Eventually these estimates will reach the House in the annual Army appropriation bill, specially classified as "nonmilitary items." Then after the gantlet of legislative scrutiny, actual cash will begin to reach the hands of Brown's thousands of workers.

Harbors and channels on the Gulf Coast were allotted $3,088,500. The Great Lakes system would be given $7,333,400. Canals along the coasts from Boston to Corpus Christi, Tex., would take $7,209,300.

New York Figure.

The port of New York and surrounding waters, including Newark Bay, would get $2,998,400; the Delaware River from Trenton through Philadelphia to the sea, $3,250,000; Baltimore harbor and channels, $640,000; Savannah harbor, $447,000 and Mobile harbor, $300,000.

On the entire Mississippi River system Brown would spend $25,030,000. This includes $2,675,000 from the mouth of the Ohio to the Illinois River; $4,545,000 between the Illinois and Minneapolis; $4,900,000 for the Illinois River; $6,663,000 for the Missouri River; $3,620,000 for the Ohio River; $700,000 for the Monongahela River and $1,545,000 for the Kanawha River.

On the Pacific, San Francisco harbor would receive $445,000; Monterey harbor, $245,000 and Honolulu harbor, $410,000.

To the Great Lakes system connecting channels $3,273,900 was allotted, including $1,234,000 for the Detroit River.

Out-of-Way Places Combed for Jury

Non-Newspaper Reading Panel Sought to Try Mountaineer.

Idabel, Okla., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Remote nooks of McCurtain County were searched today for jurors for the trial of Charles Draper, rugged mountaineer, charged with the murder of three men after robbing them in a wooded section near the Arkansas State line.

His shaggy hair tousled and his face unshaven, Draper was brought into district court this morning to begin the fight for his life that he determined upon after becoming the father of a son. Previously he had confessed the triple killing, and indicated he would plead guilty, provided officers would not prosecute until after the baby was born.

The regular jury panel of 52 was exhausted early, and Judge George T. Arnett delegated four officers to seek 40 veniremen each in communities where newspapers are not circulated extensively. Court was recessed for the day.

NAVY LEAGUE URGES CONGRESSIONAL QUIZ

Gardiner Returns to Attack as Possibility of Action in Senate Looms.

Associated Press.

Returning to the attack, William Howard Gardiner, President of the Navy League, said yesterday that President Hoover's Naval attitude called for a "Congressional investigation into his entire conduct of naval affairs."

As Gardiner spoke, the prospect that Congress would go into the substance of the controversy between Mr. Hoover and the Navy League grew.

Chairman Hale of the Senate Naval Committee said yesterday he planned to introduce a bill calling for the building of the Navy to the limits of the London treaty.

He estimated it would ask authorizations for new ships costing between $800,000,000 and $900,000,000. There is little doubt that in sifting this and other naval legislation, the entire dispute will be reviewed.

Gardiner Reaffirms Charge.

The first pamphlet issued by Gardiner charged Mr. Hoover with "abysmal ignorance" of naval matters. The aroused chief executive asked for an apology. Instead, Gardiner reaffirmed yesterday his feeling that the President knows very little about the Navy.

The Navy League head centered upon a proposal by Mr. Hoover more than a year ago that food supplies should be immune from interference in time of war.

Gardiner said it was inconceivable that any one who understands the situation could have made such a suggestion, adding the alternative was to consider the proposal as the "ill advised nostrum" of a layman.

"Misconceptions" Are Scored.

Gardiner's original charges caused Mr. Hoover to name a committee of prominent men to investigate.

The committee's verdict was distinctly unfavorable to Gardiner. It charged him with false assumptions and misrepresentation, but the Navy League stood by its head.

It replied that the committee had also based its conclusions on false assumptions.

Gardiner referred yesterday to what he termed Mr. Hoover's "organized efforts to discredit the Navy," but said he preferred to devote his attention to the Chief Executive's "misconceptions" of naval duties.

CROWD SEES STUNTS OF JUNIOR LEAGUERS

Cabaret and Dance Given by Capital Group Proves Great Success.

The Junior League of Washington, which is already famous for its annual parties to enrich their coffers for charity work, has one more to its credit with last night's cabaret and patchwork party ball at the Mayflower. They were economical in the matter of decorations, saving their money for their extra work for the many needy this winter, and the tables were left for each host or hostess to decorate according to his or her fancy. A hot supper was served at these tables at midnight.

Boxes, in addition to the regular boxes of the ballroom, were placed on the floor all around the center, leaving a wide space in the middle the full length of the ballroom for the "stunts" and the famous race. Boxes also were placed in the Chinese room adjoining the ballroom, and the orchestra was seated between the two rooms. A track 12 feet wide was built the length of the ballroom, with hurdles and standards holding markers for the race, in which the keenest interest was shown.

Stunts Precede Dancing.

The girls also economized in doing without a professional coach for the various stunts they gave preceding the general dancing. Everything went with a zip and there appeared no necessity for having a "coach." There were cigarette girls to help keep the atmosphere smoky, and candy and flowers to entice more money. Miss Dorothy Hill was chairman of the cigarette girls, who were Mrs. Chester Lockwood, Mrs. Robert B. Phillips, jr., Miss Louise Claytor, Mrs. John J. Whelan, Mrs. Frederick Siddons, Mrs. Francis M. Tompkins, Miss Rebecca Davidson, Miss Phyllis Hight, Miss Ann Perin, Miss Margo Wyeth and Miss Hume.

The fashion show was a great success under the direction of Mrs. William Jasper DuBose, chairman, who had assisting her as models Mrs. Cortlandt Parker, Mrs. William North Sturtevant, Miss Laura Tuckerman, Miss Mary Murray Hume, Miss Charlotte Childress, Miss Elizabeth Dunlop, Mrs. Suzanne Smith, Miss Norvell Munford, and Mrs. Charles Parker Stone.

Mrs. Blaine Mallan and Mr. Paul Wrangle danced the intricate tango and made a beautiful thing of it, and Miss Hallie Brooke and M. Jacques Paris, of the French Embassy, did the Merry Widow Waltz, which was equally beautiful.

Race Features Evening.

The high light of the evening was the race between Admiral Grayson's Happy Scot, Mrs. Payne Whitney's Green Cheese, and Mr. Breckinridge Long's Pinita, all impersonated by clever men in society. Their jockeys were Mrs. Jacques de Sibour for Green Cheese, Mrs. Campbell Pritchett for Happy Scot, and Miss Katherine Dunlop for Pinita, all in the colors of their mounts' stables. Mrs. de Sibour was in purple fuschia, Mrs. Pritchett in purple with white cuffs, and Miss Dunlop wore crimson satin with gold sleeves and cap.

The "steeds" were represented by Mr. John Sweeney, Mr. Gene Roberts, Mr. McCook Dunlop, Mr. Sam Beach, Mr. Griffith Warfield, and Lieut. Charles McVey 3d.

Mrs. Carl B. Kurtz was chairman of the ball committee and responsible for the success of the stunts, with the assistance of a large committee of the Junior League girls.

Innumerable dinner parties preceded the ball, which was very late in beginning and very early in the morning ending.

Notables in Attendance.

The Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Ferrera entertained a box party at the ball when their guests were the Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik, the Bolivian Minister and Senora de Abelli, the Counselor of the German Embassy and Frau Leitner, and the Counselor of the Czechoslovak Legation and Mme. Skalicky.

Representative and Mrs. Richard Aldrich were dinner hosts for their debutante daughter, Miss Janet White, the guests later going on to the ball.

They had in their company the Canadian Minister and Mrs. Herridge, Representative and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Leland Harrison and the Military Attache of the Swedish Legation and Countess von Rosen.

Mrs. Cloman Is Hostess.

Mrs. Sidney A. Cloman entertained at dinner for her niece, Mrs. Campbell Pritchett, later joining a group, in a box, which included Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schoellkopf, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, Mr. and Mrs. Breckenridge Long, Mrs. Frank C. Letts and Mr. Grant Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. William McClellan Ritter entertained at dinner, later going on to the ball. They had as their guests the Counselor of the Danish Legation and Mme. de Wichfeld, the Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Weidel, Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Snow, jr., Mr. Pendleton Turner and Lieut. Col. James A. Ulio, White House aid.

The Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy and Mme. Prieto had as their guests at the ball, Representative and Mrs. Fred A. Britten, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Duncan McKenney, Mr. and Mrs. William Jefferies Chewning and Mr. and Mrs. James Willett, son-in-law and daughter of Mme. Prieto.

Mrs. Imbrie Entertains.

Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie entertained a party of young people at the ball last evening in honor of Mlle. Reine Claudel, daughter of the French Ambassador and Mme. Claudel. Her other guests were Miss Dora White, Miss Kate Carlisle, Miss Elsie Ekengren, Senor Don Ramon Padilla, Second Secretary of the Spanish Embassy; Nobile Carlo Andrea Soardi, Secretary of the Italian Embassy; Mr. J. H. van Royen, jr., Attache of the Netherlands Legation; Mr. Eugene Scallen, Secretary of the Legation of the Union of South Africa, and Mr. Berwin, of Philadelphia.

Before the ball, Mrs. Imbrie entertained informally at dinner for her guest, Mrs. Frank Hays Gore, who is visiting her for a few days.

Miss Sylvia Meredith entertained at dinner, later taking her guests to the ball. They included Miss Anne Carter Greene, Miss Emily Ecker, Mr. Richard Gwathmey, Mr. Merrick Parker and Mr. Fontaine Bradley.

Group Has Progressive Dinner.

A group of young people who went to the ball together varied the usual dinner by making theirs progressive. The group included Mr. Mannix Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Jean Delattre Seguy, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Phillips, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Block, Miss Frances Archbold, of New York; Mr. Paul Hufty, Mr. Gibbs Sherrill, Miss Alice Dodge and Mr. Rafael Matacena. The first course was eaten at Mr. Mannix Walker's home, the main course at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Seguy, a third at Mr. and Mrs. Phillips', and the last at the Blocks' Georgetown home.

Mr. and Mrs. Berkeley Simmons entertained at dinner when their guests were Mr. and Mrs. Donald McKnew, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Noyes, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kurtz, Mr. and Mrs. Blaine Mallan, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Adair, Mr. Moran McConihe, Mr. William Cushman, Mr. Knisley Garnett and Mrs. Susan Smith.

rounded by klieg lights and be-whiskered photographers.

"Ely! Ely!" she cried, "That's no place for Fifi and Jump-Bid!"

The children smiled and blinked before the glare of the lights and little Jump-Bid, aged two-and-a-half, spoke up: "Where's Santa Claus, daddy?"

Finally the picture-taking was over and, already a half hour behind time, the players and special guests, all in formal clothes, went downstairs to a dinner at which Mrs. Culbertson was hostess. Places were laid for 50 and some 65 showed up.

After the dinner came a fifteen-minute broadcast over a national network, in which the participants and officials were introduced to the unseen audience.

M. H. Aylesworth spoke, and Bruce Barton spoke. Frank Crowninshield, editor of Vanity Fair, announced into the microphone that the champagne was flowing in great profusion and that he was certain the first few hands would be rather muddled.

Culbertson, in his brief radio talk, announced that after the 150 rubbers of the epic contest have been completed, whether he wins or loses, he is retiring from match play and will devote his entire time to studying bridge theory, writing on it and in educating his children.

Plan Held Balked To Rob Postal Safe

Brightwood Nigh tClerk Credited With Driving Thieves Away.

The safe of the Brightwood Postoffice was probably the goal of thieves Sunday night when the building was broken into and $4 in cash and a small quantity of stamps stolen.

Patrolman S. R. McKee, of the Eleventh Precinct, arrested a man who gave his name as Michael Quinn, 55 years old, of Philadelphia, as a suspect shortly after midnight when he was discovered sitting in a parked car in which was found nitroglycerin, burglars' tools and some stamps.

The theft was discovered by Fred W. Heine, of 4417 Iowa avenue, night clerk at the postoffice, when he reported for work at 10:30 o'clock Sunday night. Entrance had been gained by prying the lock off a rear entrance and forcing the door to the mail-room. It is believed by detectives and postal inspectors that the thieves were preparing to blow the safe when Heine scared them off by putting his key in the front door.

WEST POINT RITES SET FOR J. B. TREAT

Auto Accident Injuries Are Fatal to Son of Former Commandant.

Private funeral services will be held this week at West Point for Joseph B. Treat, 37 years old, son of Maj. Gen. Charles G. Treat, U. S. A., retired, former commandant of West Point, who died early yesterday as the result of injuries received Sunday when his automobile struck a telephone pole on the Marlboro pike, 2½ miles beyond the District line.

Charles Facine, 1315 Massachusetts avenue northwest, the driver of the car, escaped injury. A blood transfusion was given Mr. Treat in an effort to save his life.

Mr. Treat was graduated from West Point in 1914. Prior to that he attended St. Luke's Preparatory School, near Philadelphia. When the war broke out, he was in Paris on graduation leave, and assisted Ambassador Herrick in aiding all Americans who wished to depart from the city.

Mr. Treat served with the Fifth Cavalry in the Mexican campaign with Gen. Pershing and was later transferred to the Twenty-first Field Artillery, remaining with that unit throughout the World War. He resigned from the Army after the War.

Survivors of Mr. Treat besides his father, are two sisters, Mrs. A. V. Arnold, wife of Maj. A. V. Arnold, of Fort Benning, Ga., and Mrs. A. B. Butler, jr., of Tulsa, Okla. He was unmarried. He lived with his father at 1818 Nineteenth street northwest.

Rankin, Tex., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Testimony that Graham Barnett, former Texas ranger and "two-gun" man, had sought Sheriff W. C. Fowler a few hours before Barnett was slain by the officer with a submachine gun, was given today before a special court of inquiry.

Conclusions of the inquiry, which began yesterday shortly after the shooting on a downtown corner of this little western Texas town, will not be revealed until the February term of court, when Sheriff Fowler will be tried for murder. He is at liberty on $10,000 bail, and has refused to comment other than to say he shot after the former ranger moved toward his belt, where he carried a revolver.

LEADERS REELECTED BY WOMEN'S PARTY

Mrs. Belmont Again Heads National Organization; Mrs. Wiley Renamed.

The national Women's Party yesterday reelected Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, of New York, as its president at a biennial meeting in the Mayflower Hotel.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, of Washington, was retained as national chairman. Miss Gail Laughlin, of Maine, was elected first vice president; Mrs. Florence Bayard Hilles, of Delaware, was chosen second vice president, and Miss Anita Pollitzer, of South Carolina, was made third vice president.

Other officers elected included Mrs. Dwight Clark, of Washington, secretary, and Miss Laura Berrien, of Washington, national treasurer.

As Congress opened the feminists urged correction of certain inequalities in the nationality laws, and passage of an equal-rights amendment to the Constitution. The party staged a celebration on the steps of the Capitol in honor of the arrival in the Senate of Mrs. Hattie Caraway, its first active woman member.

Plans also were laid for a memorial to the late Senator Thaddeus Caraway, who long had espoused the cause of feminism. The organization will have made a bronze placque bearing the words used by Senator Caraway in dedicating the national headquarters of the party here when he said:

"The last shot for the freedom of the States was fired from this building, and I confidently predict that the last shot for women's freedom will be fired from here."

Miss Gail Laughlin urged the party to enter a demand for universal jury duty for women, pointing out that a woman convicted of a crime might claim that her conviction had been unconstitutional and that she had not been tried by a jury of her peers if there were no women allowed to sit on the jury which brought the verdict.

At the State's request Jones filed a copy of the oath of the United Mine Workers of America and answered questions concerning the organization's rules.

Enraged Farmers Halt Leaf Sales

Crowd of 1,500 in Lexington, Ky., Objects to Cut in Prices.

Lexington, Ky., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—A crowd of farmers, numbering more than 1,500, halted the opening burley tobacco sales at all four warehouses where sales had been scheduled here today.

Led by George Weiner, of Georgetown, Ky., whom police twice had unsuccessfully attempted to arrest, the farmers marched from one warehouse to the other and demonstrated so vociferously that managers of the houses stopped the sales.

Objection to prices, which ranged from $10 to $12 per hundred, compared with $18 last year, was the cause of the farmers' action. Sales at all of the houses had been halted temporarily this morning.

Engineer Head Says Facts to Prove Charge Have Not Been Given.

(Associated Press.)

A promise to correct any proved abuses of labor in the Mississippi levee camps was made yesterday by Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown. The chief of Army engineers emphasized he had yet to be given specific cases of ill-treatment, as charged by American Federation of Labor representatives.

On returning from an inspection trip of Mississippi flood control work under him, he said "We will soon know the truth. Inquiry is under way."

The officer pointed out Government inspectors are on the projects all the time who can ascertain the facts, although normally they do not attempt to interfere with relations between the contractors and their labor.

Suicide Verdict Found On Man Hanged in Cellar

A verdict of suicide was returned yesterday in the case of Max Binstock, 47 years old, whose body was found hanging in the cellar of his home in Cottage City, Md., late Sunday night. The verdict was given by Coroner Robert E. Altemus.

The Bladensburg rescue squad attempted to revive the man while bringing him to Casualty Hospital, but he was pronounced dead on arrival.

Lieut. Noville Improving.

New York, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Lieut. George O. Noville, who suffered a fractured skull and fractured legs when struck by a taxicab December 1, was reported improved, although still on the serious list, at Bellevue Hospital today.

'RICH WITH RITCHIE' IS CRY IN CHICAGO

Leaders Cheer Maryland's Governor on Visit to Board of Trade.

Chicago, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—A voice rising from the floor of the Chicago Board of Trade today may have given the United States the latest thing in presidential campaign slogans.

"Get rich with Ritchie," rang out in the midst of an unusual ovation being accorded Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland when he and his party of Maryland notables were introduced from the gallery.

Almost complete suspension of trading for three or four minutes, in itself rare, marked the governor's visit, and the uproar that followed utterance of the spontaneous slogan was notable.

Here to address the annual dinner of the Illinois Manufacturers Association tomorrow evening, Ritchie was frequently reminded at other times and places of his eligibility as a 1932 Democratic presidential candidate.

A group of 200 men which could have passed for a comprehensive "Who's Who of Chicago" greeted the Maryland Governor at a luncheon and reception tendered by George F. Getz, millionaire coal dealer, sportsman, and personal friend of Ritchie's, at the Chicago Club.

Mayor Anton J. Cermak, Lieut. Gov. Fred N. Sterling of Illinois, Melvin A. Traylor, banker, and himself mentioned as a presidential possibility, all spoke encouragingly of Ritchie's chances to become the Democratic party's candidate next summer at the convention, which, the Chicagoans expressed hope, will be held in Chicago.

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

I HAVE spent considerable money and time on the planting and care of low-growing evergreens about my new home. Most of the shrubs have died or are dying out. I followed the directions that were given to me by the dealers in every case. I purchased specimens from reliable firms who carry only healthy stock. What do you suppose was the trouble? CHARLES G. P.

Your failure may have been due to any or all of the following reasons: Too deep planting; as a rule evergreens should be set so that the plants are only an inch below the nursery mark. Injury by dogs; small varieties of arborvitaes and retinosporas are apt to be killed or injured by dogs. The only way to prevent this trouble is to place a wire screen about each bush. Newly set out plants must be watered regularly; summer droughts are hard on them. Instead of sprinkling them every night they should be literally soaked three times each week. Some may have been injured by drying winter winds. Hemlocks are particularly susceptible to winter winds. All newly planted evergreens should be protected by a wind shield during their first winter. Then, the root system may have been deprived of too many fibrous roots and consequently the tops do not get enough moisture to supply that which is lost by the plant through transpiration. Insufficient drainage may also be a cause of failure. They resent "wet feet." Plants may also become attacked by disease or infested with red spiders or other insects. If you note a sudden change in the foliage, consult any reliable nurseryman and do not wait until the disease is in epidemic form.

I am about to plant a hedge that will act as a screen. Are the newer lilacs practical for this purpose? Lilacs are the only shrubs I seem to be able to think of, but there must be more. MANLY H. T.

French and American hybrid lilacs make beautiful hedges. Then you must not overlook spirea Van Houttei, some of the elders, and even the deadwoods which are well suited for such use. Before deciding, consult at least three catalogues. Read the cultural notes as well as the descriptions of the shrubs listed.

I want to make some ammoniacal copper sulphate for spraying fruit trees. What is the fromula?

MRS. LILA G. T.

Ammoniacal copper sulphate may be made by mixing 5 drams of copper carbonate to 1 pint of ammonia; this will be sufficient to mix with 10 gallons of water. Of course, you add the water only when you are actually ready to begin spraying. The solution should be kept tightly corked in a bottle until used.

I have six windows with southern exposures. I am anxious to have some plants in each of these windows. This will be a new departure, for I have previously been living in an apartment where flowers were impossible. What varieties are apt to do well in the house where the rooms will be well ventilated and the atmosphere as moist as possible. My florist suggested placing the pots on trays of pebbles to increase the humidity. Is this a wise plan?

A NEW HOME OWNER.

Under such conditions you should be able to grow almost any flowering plant. The trays of pebbles will be a practical aid in keeping the atmosphere moist and will at the same time prevent overwatering the plants, as the surplus water will drain down through the pebbles on the bottom of the tray. Geraniums, fuchsias, pepper plants, Jerusalem cherries, lantana, calla lilies, primroses of any variety, flowering maples, African violets, narcissi (grown in pebbles), poinsettias, calceolarias, gloxinias and impatience sultanas will all do well in a southern window. You should also be successful with any of the spring-flowering bulbs.

Jane Claire INTERPRETS the MODE

Deep raspberry-purple broadcloth trimmed with blue fox makes a coat to the dress sketched yesterday. (Sketched in a New York shop.)

New York, Dec. 7.

IT'S one thing to merely report about the mode and its vagrancies, and quite another thing again to write this Fashun-Collom! Every time I read a mode reporting article I think of that—and today all the bouquets are in our own hands being handed to ourselves.

Now, for instance, don't you remember what I told you about the Eugenie hats? At a time when most writers were reporting their success, which every one could see anyhow, I told you that they would be a flash in the mode, and to watch out for them. Also I told you that there were many hats in the mode at that time which were not at all Second Empire, but as distinctly new in style as the little Eugenie hat, and suggested that they would be the better investment. In fact, after I browbeat, positively browbeat, my New York modiste into making over about 30 hats for me, we chose everything in the way of a new style except any hat that curved over one eye and swirled away into a feather!

Hats are still pancakey, as it were, still awfully chic and fanciful, still unusual and still usually at variance with the type of gown they seem to get worn with. I wish all good Dah-rayites would take more care than ever before in choosing hats for that reason, choosing one or ten, whatever your wardrobe limit is going to be, with both eyes on the dresses and coats it—the hat—is going with. It is upon such a small matter that the crown of chic sets!

And then about purple, I wish, too, that people wouldn't be so afraid of this color or any of its royal and elegant shades, because the new shades and combinations of purple are becoming. But if you buy a purple outfit, be warned that it is neither a staple color nor an enduring fad, and choose some kind of material and a style of gown that will remain stylish long enough to be dyed, and will dye well, of course. That's my very own little secret for wearing whatever colors happen to be stylish, yet not being really extravagant.

How would you like to make the best undergarment you ever saw or imagined in the whole world, and then how would you like to find out that it just took three-quarters of a yard of material after all that? And then, when you were wearing this all-in-one piece garment, which combines brassiere, chemise and panties, how would you like to remember that it took only the sending of a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare department of The Post to get the detailed and illustrated directions for making it, and that you were able to make it from these directions? Well, that's my story, and I'll stick to it—and no one can even dispute it after seeing the leaflet! Better send for it!

• • • •

The coat that could make an ensemble for the dress I illustrated yesterday is sketched today. It is raspberry purple broadcloth in a deeper shade than the dress, and trimmed with blue fox. The collar is interesting, and can be worn a number of ways besides the one the little lady is wearing in the sketch.

Au revoir!

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

Which Man.

DEAR Frances McDonald: I doubt very much that this will be in print, but I am hoping so, as I really need your advice, badly.

I am in love with a young man who has a bone disease, which is being treated, and there is a slight possibility that it may be cured. However, it has been running on for some time, and it seems the chance of recovery is very slight.

This young man wants me to marry him, but my friends advise me against it, saying I would have an invalid on my hands. I can also marry another man much older, but I do not love him. My friends advise me to do this, saying I would learn to love him in time, and that having children would fill my life, and help me to forget the other man whom I will always love. I am so upset and so miserable, I don't know what to do. I am 26, and would like to marry and have a home. If I wait, I may never have either. I am not the type that is considered popular with men, by that I mean I am not the flapper type, and I doubt very much that if I don't marry now I will likely ever do so.

If I did as my heart dictates, I would wait for the first man I mentioned above. But it would mean years, and likely he would never be able to do as much for me as the other man. It would also mean I would not have children by him.

Would the mating instinct take the place of love, if I should follow the more sensible road to marriage? Is it possible I should forget the old love in time, and become happy in my home, with my children? My friends say this man was sent just to help me in my predicament, and by all means to take him, quick.

The other remaining thing to do, is to keep the friendship of the one I love, but marry neither man. Would friendship fill the gap of single blessedness? It is lonely to live alone when your married friends seem so happy?

I don't know what to do, and I am very unhappy. What would you advise me doing? I merely wish someone could help me. I will be hoping and watching for your reply and I will be very grateful for the time and thought which you will take in answering. MARY ANNE.

The fact that the man, despite his condition, urges you to marry him is the answer to your problem. He is the self-centered type that thinks only of himself and consequently makes life miserable for whatever woman marries him.

No man in ill-health has any right to urge marriage upon a woman, and no real man does so. Your attachment is an unfortunate one, but as it can not possibly be founded upon considerations that render attachments eternal, you will readily outgrow what is at best a substitute for love.

Remaining single because of this sort of situation would be spiritual suicide. The man is not the sort to justify such a gesture. If you married him you would hate him within a year, because of the very quality that makes him urge upon you a marriage that would render his life more comfortable while wrecking yours. Such men have no honor, no ethics, no regard for any rights but his own. And all this you would learn in the first four weeks of marriage. Hence the absurdity of contemplating any sacrifice for such a man.

If you will accept the fact that your present attachment is not love but a mere emotional experience common to most young women, and will intelligently consider your friends' advice and the facts upon which their opinion of the older man is founded, you will arrive at the correct solution of your problem. At present you are feeling instead of thinking—a mistake most women make in choosing an object for their vagrant affections. Begin to think. And act accordingly.

What Today Means to You

"SAGITTARIUS."

IF December 8th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m., from 2:30 p. m. to 4 p. m., and from 9 p. m. to 11 p. m. The danger periods are from 8 a. m. to 9:35 a. m., and from 6:30 p. m. to 8 p. m.

The planetary aspects governing December 8th should bring a day of variety and interest; interruptions will delay work, and surprises will vary the monotony of the day's routine. The benefits derived will be found in your mental storehouse and not in your material gains.

The children born on this December 8th will be born with an impetus to achieve things and will not be content to play the part of a mediocre role on life's stage. They will have a great deal of personal magnetism and charm, and their winning manner will help to pave the way for them.

As a December 8th person, you are prudent and reserved, and are seldom seen off your dignity. Your manner invites attention and respect, but it discourages love and affection. You cherish certain ideals—a respect for justice, a pride in good work, and emphatically a sense of proportion. Your motives are not selfish, your character is irreproachable, and your efficiency is recognizable. You are eminently fitted for positions requiring brains and skill.

You are too self-sufficient to be popular, and there is a danger of your turning out a prig. You are too self-controlled to ever let yourself go; you do not know the meaning of the word intemperance in anything. You do not suffer through the usual human frailities; neither do you enjoy the usual trivial human pleasures. You do not know how to be an understanding person, although you try, in your great sense of justice, to be fair. You are not a sympathetic person, for you feel little in common with the ordinary run of mankind. Your emotions are too well schooled to permit you to be warmly affectionate. You never betray your real feelings.

Your actions and your words are studied; you are not given to doing things spontaneously. You are deliberate about your judgments, and you seldom change your mind.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

PECULIARITIES OF PEOPLE OF TWO TYPES.

Long, Narrow or Linear Type.

NARROW head; hatchet face; long, narrow, straight nose; space between eyes narrow; small, often receding chin; teeth crowded and ill set; abundant hair on head, reduced hair on body; neck long and small; long limbs and trunk; shoulders high and angular; round shouldered; chest long and narrow; small chest measure; ribs set obliquely, angle of ribs at pit of stomach narrow; expansion poor; heart small and rather low in chest; arteries and veins thin; abdomen short vertically; pelvis wide; liver low and well over to the right.

The stomach is low. Most of the people with dropped stomach belong to this class. To people of the group so-called dropped stomach is natural. However, a dropped stomach does not empty well and people with this condition are somewhat disposed to digestive troubles. They are likely to have dropping of other organs and to complain of the symptoms which accompany low blood pressure.

They have not much abdominal fat. They are generally lean. Their muscles are lean and not well developed. The body is slender and many of them are underweight, according to insurance tables. They are prone to be farsighted and have poor circulation. They are often pale and sallow; assimilation poor; constipated. They pass through adolescence early. The males usually sing bass, if they sing. People of this type should eat a highly nutritious diet containing plenty of milk, meat and eggs.

In disposition, personality, and mind they are intense, intellectual and self-centered; fond of reforming; dogmatic, fanatical, deficient in sense of humor, have poor executive ability, little endurance; are nervous, excitable, introverted, self-conscious, and prone to ideas of persecution.

Short, Wide, or Lateral Type.

The qualities of those of the lateral type are:

Round head, round or square face, thick nose, wide between the eyes, prominent chin, teeth not crowded, moderate hair on head and body, neck short and thick, limbs and trunk short and thick, chest short but broad, angle at end of breastbone wide, heart large and placed high, arteries and veins thick, abdomen well developed and likely to protrude, liver large, stomach high, plenty of fat generally, including in the abdomen.

The muscles are well developed, bones large, body short and thick and, as a rule, overweight. They are likely to be nearsighted. The circulation is good and they are ruddy and fullblooded. They tend to high blood pressure. They are apt to have good nutrition and good digestion. They are not likely to be constipated. When they burst into song they usually take the tenor scale.

The broads are socially easygoing. They are tolerant in morals and religion and they have a well developed sense of humor. Most of them have good executive ability, great endurance, and phlegmatic temperament. They are likely to be slow and methodical. They are extrovert and free from sensitiveness and self-consciousness. If they develop mental trouble it is likely to be of the manic-depressive type.

The classification of men into two great types is the work of Dr. George Draper, in greater part, though it has had the support of Drs. Stockard, Thompson, Lucas, Palmer, and others. If it could be considered final, and of universal application with no exceptions and no mingling of types, it would be rather easy for any person to classify himself and, having done so, to choose his vocation, lay his life plans, and list his disease enemies. Perhaps some day it may be modified enough to make it apply to the great bulk of the people. As it now is, there are too many people who cross their qualities.

SHRINKING OF GUMS.

CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

By ELY CULBERTSON

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

By ELY CULBERTSON,
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

THE ELEMENTS OF CONTRACT
LESSON 1.

This is the first of a series of articles in response to requests from numerous readers, designed to explain the elementary principles of Contract Bridge. One of these will appear each week. In them Mr. Culbertson will write especially for the benefit of those who have never played Contract and who may even be unfamiliar with the method of playing it. The articles will cover the game from its basic elements to the higher phases of Contract Bridge. The series in its entirety will comprise a complete course of instruction in "How to Play Contract."

CONTRACT BRIDGE is the fourth in line of succession of a great series of partnership games played with cards. The first was Whist, and Contract is a logical development of that game. Intervening between Contract Bridge, as we know it today, and Whist, which is still liked by many people, was Bridge and Auction. Auction retains many followers, but Contract, because of the greater degree of science in its bidding, is gaining in popularity daily.

The game of Contract, like Whist, Bridge and Auction Bridge, is played by four people with a pack of 52 cards, two playing as partners against two others. The arrangement as to partners may be made in any way desired. The laws of Bridge provide that partners shall be determined by drawing cards and that the two players drawing the highest cards shall be partners against the two drawing the lowest. This having been settled, the player who drew the highest card becomes the Dealer. The deck is shuffled and must always be cut by the player sitting at the right of the Dealer. After the cut is completed, the Dealer deals one card in turn to each of the four players in rotation, starting with the player on his left, until all 52 are dealt. There must be a new deal with the same pack whenever any player does not receive his cards in regular order or when one player receives more than thirteen cards. After the hand is played, the player to the left of the first Dealer deals the cards for the next hand. For convenience, it is usual to use two packs of cards and these should have backs of different colors, so that the decks will not be confused. The partners sit opposite each other. While the Dealer is dealing one deck, it is the duty of his partner to shuffle the "still" deck (the pack not then in use).

The four suits into which the deck of cards is divided, are ranked, highest last, as follows: clubs, diamonds, hearts, spades. Clubs and diamonds are the minor suits; hearts and spades, the major suits. They may easily be remembered by their initial letters in alphabetical order, thus—c and d, (earliest in the alphabet) minor; h and s, major.

The thirteen cards of the suit rank as follows: Ace, King, Queen, Knave, Ten and so on down to the deuce (two spot), which is the lowest card of any suit.

The cards are played in rotation from left to right as in nearly all card games. Each round of four cards, one from each player in turn, comprises a trick. The highest card played in each round takes or wins the trick. Partners count their combined tricks—one of the two picks up all that they win together, and places them on the table backs up, in front of him. The first six tricks taken by either side do not count in the score—only those over six are counted as tricks made. Thus, if seven tricks are taken, one is scored.

TODAY'S POINTER.

Question: What is needed to raise one in a suit to three in a suit?

Answer: Five supporting tricks. (4+5 equals 9.)

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

Jump Overcalls are not Forcing.

Question: Would you kindly advise the writer how the following hands should be bid? A bids one diamond, B has the following hand:

Spades x x x
Hearts A K J 9 6 5
Diamonds A

and bids two hearts. Was that a correct bid? C passes and D, who is B's partner, has the following hand:

Spades x x x x
Hearts 10
Diamonds x x x
Clubs Q 9 7 5 4

How should D bid in response to B's Forcing bid?

Answer: B's bid of two hearts is correct. D with an absolute blank hand and a singleton trump should pass; his partner's Jump Overcall after A's Opening bid is not strictly Forcing, but merely a strong encouragement to keep the bidding open.

Lead of a King Against Notrump Question:

East	South	West	North
1 club	Pass	3NT	Dbl.
4 clubs	Pass	4NT	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

SOUTH
Spades K 10 9 x x
Hearts 6 2
Diamonds Q x x x
Clubs x x

Spades A
Hearts x x
Diamonds K x x x
Clubs K Q J x x x

North, having the club Ace and A K J x x in hearts, leads the King of hearts. South plays the deuce (2). North then leads the heart Ace; South plays the six. North leads another heart; South discards the spade 9.

The question is: Should South play deuce 6 or should he play 6 to first trick and deuce the second lead?

Answer: South should play the 2 of hearts on the first lead, as any card other than the lowest encourages partner to continue the suit and conveys the information that the suit led may be readily established or is already set. In some cases, for instance holding 10 9 x, the 9 should be played so as to be prepared to unblock.

Plus Values

Question: Will you be good enough to clear up for me a little confusion I have relative to plus and partial score bidding?

Are there two kinds of "plus values" in the Culbertson System? How many honor-tricks in this hand?

Spades + Q 10 9
Hearts A K Q
1+
Diamonds A J
Clubs A K Q 4 3

The heart Queen, diamond Knave and club Queen each have a plus value but it is correct that they do not combine or constitute any honor values?

1-½
Hearts K Q J 5
Diamonds Q 7
Clubs J 10 5

In this hand it is clear that the diamond and club pluses form ½ honor-trick. Are the Queen and Knave of spades "plus values" that can be counted only as playing-tricks?

Answer: You may distinguish various kinds of plus values; i.e., isolated Queens and Knaves, one or more J 10 combinations, additional honors in suits headed by A K, A Q and additional suit length in the Responding Hand over and above the minimum required for a Takeout. From the very nature of the values and depending upon which side is the Declarer, it will be easy to see how these values should be counted. No. 1 and 2 are valuable, both in offense and defense and especially for purposes of Takeouts. No. 3 will form the basis for Rebids by Declarer, but will be practically useless in defense. Finally No. 4 will serve for Rebids in the Responding Hand after partner has assisted, but will even be a liability against opponent's declaration.

Hand No. 1 counts 5-½ honor-tricks (spade Queen and diamond Knave combine to form ½ honor-trick), the other two Queens are available as plus values for Declarer's Rebids. The same applies to the spade Queen and Knave in hand No. 2. The plus values contained in these hands will, of course, also be valuable in partner's declaration.

A Close Decision

Question: Will you please tell me the correct bid of the following hand? There was a difference of opinion when the hand was played.

DEALER
Spades A K 7 3 2
Hearts A 5 4
Diamonds J 8
Clubs A Q 4

THE PARTNER
Spades Q 6
Hearts K J 7 6
Diamonds 9 4 2
Clubs 7 5 3 2

Answer: The bidding on the hand submitted by you should be one spade, one notrump, three spades, pass. A bid of only two spades or two notrump on the second round would not convey the full strength of the hand, whereas a bid of three notrump would be too hazardous if vulnerable, although feasible, if not vulnerable. This makes it necessary to take the slight risk of misinforming your partner as to the strength of the spades by jumping the bid on the second round in that suit. Partner's notrump bid is distinctly shaded (only 1 trick: Hearts K J x x in addition to the spade Queen) but in my estimation justified and in the spirit of the Forcing System. The Dealer might well be short of a two-bid and yet game be very probable (for instance, spade Knave in addition to the rest of his holding).

COUPLE IS ARRESTED CLOSE TO TEA HOUSE

Capital Man and Woman Held by White-Slave Investigators.

A man and a woman are being held for questioning by Federal agents investigating the white-slave traffic after the couple were arrested by Prince Georges County police near the Bladensburg tea house, which was the scene of a shooting which initiated the Federal probe.

The couple are John E. Peterson and Hortense J. Barrow, both of Washington. The woman formerly lived in Pennsylvania, she told police, but was brought to Washington by the man, with whom she has been living, the authorities said. The two were questioned last night by the agents, but no charge has been placed against them. They are being held at Hyattsville.

The woman said that Peterson took her out in a car yesterday and stopped it on the River road, near Bladensburg. After a quarrel, she said, he threatened to kill her. She leaped from his auto and sought refuge in a nearby house, whose occupants called police.

Sergt. H. G. Machen and Howard Slater responded and arrested Peterson and the woman. Whether their arrest near the roadhouse was a coincidence or was further evidence of the white-slave plot disclosed by the shooting has not been determined.

Meanwhile the investigation of the holdup and the resultant gun battle, which killed one and wounded five was at a standstill in the county. It is expected to be resumed tomorrow, however.

American Ship Officers Explain Brazil Groundin

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Seven officers, including Capt. Thomas Simmons, of the American steamer Western World, which stranded off the coast of Brazil in August, and arrived in Hampton Roads last week, under her own power, but convoyed by a wrecking tug, gave testimony before the Norfolk steamboat inspectors today regarding the circumstances of the standing of the craft.

The testimony of all witnesses was practically the same, being in effect that the vessel went aground 1 mile below a Boyl Point light at 2:30 a. m. on August 8 during a dense fog. All of the 80 passengers were transferred without mishap to the German steamer General Aserio and landed at Rio de Janeiro.

Williamson has been in jail here since the day following the tragedy.

Prohibition Fight Delegated to West

Boston Crusaders Head Quits; Says War Shifts Beyond Alleghenies.

Boston, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Julian Codman, Boston attorney, today submitted his resignation as national commander of the Crusaders, an organization devoted to the cause of prohibition repeal. Mr. Codman said he was convinced that from now on "the fight against prohibition will be West of the Alleghenies," and "the man to lead the work, in my opinion, should also be a Westerner and a resident of that part of the country."

In a letter to Fred G. Clark, of Cleveland, Ohio, chairman of the trustees, in which he submitted his resignation, Mr. Codman recalled that the Crusaders were founded in Cleveland, "and are associated primarily with the Middle West."

He offered to retain his place on the board and, "to give such assistance as I may to my successor, and in the general work of the Crusaders in which my interest is unabated."

Pre-Revolution Tavern On South Branch Burns

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 7—The summer home of M. Joseph Craddock, former city collector, on the South Branch of the Potomac River, near Springfield, was destroyed by fire early today. The caretaker, asleep upstairs, was aroused by explosion of a shotgun in the heat. He escaped.

The building, a former farm home of logs, was near 200 years old, having been built long before the Revolutionary War, and was at one time used as a tavern on the old Romney-Springfield road. It had handwrought iron fixtures and colonial mantels and had always been well maintained.

Lindsay Is Buried Near Lincoln Tomb

Governor of Illinois Sees Body of Poet Lowered Into Grave.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Atop a hill not far from the tomb of Abraham Lincoln, whose life he ardently admired, the body of Vachel Lindsay, the poet, was laid to rest today.

The funeral service, although attended by several hundred neighbors and friends, headed by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, was simple. From the same pulpit where just a week ago Lindsay gave the last public recital of his poems, an intimate of the late writer, Dr. Clark W. Cummings, pastor of the First Christian Church, voiced his native city's tribute to the author.

The pastor revealed that at that last recital, Lindsay, who often believed his fellow townsmen did not take him seriously, was completely won over to the relief that he "had captured the soul of Springfield" when prolonged applause followed his recital.

Accused Torch Slayer of 2 In Home Pleads Not Guilty

Two murder indictments were returned by a Prince William County grand jury in Manassas yesterday against Walter Wolfenden in connection with the deaths September 25 of Goodwin Miller and his wife, Virginia. The charred bodies of the man, his wife and their infant son, were found by neighbors in the ruins of their little home near Kopp, Va.

Wolfenden, almost totally deaf, was unable to hear the true bill read to him when he was arraigned immediately after being indicted. He read the true bills himself and then entered a plea of not guilty.

Frederick P. Flynn, of Alexandria, and P. E. Bidlake, of Manassas, appearing as counsel for Wolfenden, asked the court for a bill of particulars and Judge Walter T. McCarthy directed Commonwealth's Attorney Thomas H. Lion to prepare the bill.

Trial of Wolfenden on the first murder charge, that alleging the murder of Goodwin Miller, was set for Friday. The case in which the State alleges the murder of Mrs. Virginia Miller was continued pending the outcome of the first trial.

Wolfenden, the State contends, murdered Miller and his wife, placed their bodies on the bed in their home and then set fire to the house in order to destroy evidence of the crime. His motive, the State alleges, was to collect a double indemnity insurance policy of $750. Wolfenden is alleged to have collected this policy, which was made out to him, two days after the bodies of Miller and his wife were found. The State charges he used the money to pay off an overdue mortgage on a home maintained by himself and his sister.

The State made no attempt to have Wolfenden indicted on a murder charge in the death of the Millers' 7-month-old son. It is not believed the child was killed before the house was set on fire, but that he died in the smoke and flames of his home.

In addition to the two murder indictments, the grand jury yesterday brought in a third indictment against Wolfenden, this one charging the theft of a number of chickens from a farmer near Woodbridge.

It was this charge which brought Wolfenden's arrest late in November. At the time of his arrest his back bore a number of shotgun wounds, said to have been inflicted as he fled over a fence with the stolen chickens. Wolfenden has admitted this charge, according to Commonwealth's Attorney Lion.

As Wolfenden was preparing to give bond on the chicken theft charge, Mr. Lion placed the murder charges against him, and he has been held in jail at Manassas since.

RECEIVERS REPORT ON RICHMOND BANK

Give No Indication of Amount Depositors Will Get Per Dollar.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—No indication of the amount depositors in the closed Broadway Bank and Trust Co. will receive per dollar on deposit was given in the full report of receivers filed in law and equity court today.

Total deposits of the institutions were placed at $914,610, with approximately $70 in cash on hand and due from other banks.

The bank's assets had a book value of $1,340,340, but auditors reported to receivers that the bank suffered an apparent loss in the value of securities during 1930-31 to the extent of $256,801 and added that "notes, real estate and fixtures propably will cause further loss."

The bank's most liquid asset consisted of approximately $500,000 in loans and discounts and the amount to be paid depositors depends upon these loans and the securities markets.

The auditors reported that earnings of the bank for the past three years have not justified the declaration of dividends during that period amounting to $27,000."

The receivers stated that whether action will be taken to recover from stockholders dividends paid during this period remained a matter for further study.

The auditors reported that personal accounts of the late President L. W. Hoffman have "been settled or will be settled, we understand to the satisfaction of all interests." Settlements have been made by his widow, it was stated.

The receivers today recommended payment first of the deposits of trust funds in which the bank was fiduciary and requested permission of the court to pay these at once.

LYNCHBURG BANKER GETS 2-YEAR TERM

Arnold P. Talley, Official of Insolvent Depository, Pleads Guilty.

Lynchburg, Va., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Arnold Patterson Talley, official of the now insolvent Brookneal-Peoples National Bank, was sentenced to two years in the Federal penitentiary when he pleaded guilty today before Judge Henry Clay McDowell at December term of United States District Court to the counts in an indictment for misapplying bank funds and for falsely entering an overdraft.

Talley, who is 37, and the father of four small children, was indicted at the June term of court. He entered the plea of guilty through his attorney, A. D. Barksdale. Funds amounting to $3,500 were misapplied, the indictment said, and Mr. Talley entered an overdraft for $4,671.01, which should have been $5,271.89.

In a short address before the court, Mr. Barksdale endeavored to explain the fact lying behind his client's "technical misapplication of funds," and also told the judge that Talley was suffering from pulmonary trouble that was only arrested, and not cured, intimating that confinement might prove serious.

After a short consultation in his private office, Judge McDowell returned and directed the clerk to put down the two-year term against the former bank officer.

Wife-Slayer Sentenced To Penitentiary for Life

Special to The Washington Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 7—William Hiser, 61, convicted of first degree murder in court here about a week ago, was sentenced to life imprisonment in the Maryland Penitentiary today by Judge D. Lindley Sloan, one of the two judges who presided at the trial. The court, in sentencing Hiser, said that, in view of his age, that he was imposing the life term rather than the death sentence. The jury left the sentence to the discretion of the court.

Hiser killed his wife, Mrs. Anne R. Hiser, and a neighbor, Mrs. Emma Hull. He killed a son-in-law about ten years ago, and had been on parole only a short time when he shot the two women, because, he said, his wife called him a convict and would have nothing to do with him.

VIRGINIANS PRESENT MANY HOUSE BILLS

Montague Offers 16, Some of Which Involve War Pensions.

(Associated Press.)

Bills ranging from a $500,000 authorization for remodeling the Capitol to a $50 monthly pension for a Civil War widow were introduced at the opening of Congress by Virginia members.

Representative Montague, of Richmond, had the largest number, sixteen, most of which involved pensions, conferring of honorable discharge rights on dishonorable discharged members of the military and naval service, and compensation claims.

In the batch was a bill he sponsored last session which would provide $500,000 to make the Capitol more symmetrical by extending the east center section of the building.

Presents Bill Sixth Time.

Montague also presented for the sixth time a bill allowing members of the Cabinet to occupy seats in the Senate and House at all times and compelling them to be present at sessions on Tuesday and Friday. At such times they would answer questions of members regarding their departments.

Another bill introduced again by the Richmond member would provide for publication of names and heads of families, as returned in census reports, from 1800 to 1840. This measure was urged by Dr. W. A. Plecker, State registrar of vital statistics, as an aid to such offices as his own.

Purchase of Red Hill, the home of Patrick Henry, in Charlotte County, would be authorized by a bill introduced by Representative Burch, of Martinsville. The former Virginia Governor, of "Give me liberty or give me death" fame, is buried on the estate, where he lived the last five years of his life.

Restoration of Law Office.

Restoration of Henry's law office to its condition of a century and a quarter ago also would be provided by the measure. The bill did not authorize rebuilding of the Henry home, which burned in 1909, and which interested persons hope some day may be raised again.

Private bills were introduced by nearly all the Virginia members.

No Virginia bills were introduced yesterday in the Senate.

Chestertown, Md., Dec. 7.—Date of the trial of George Davis, 28-year-old confessed Negro attacker of Mrs. Elizabeth Lusby, 28, of Kennedyville, will not be known until the Cecil County Circuit Court convenes at Elkton next Monday morning, Judge T. J. Keating, of Centerville, said today at a special session of Kent County Circuit Court. The date depends, the court said, on the Cecil court docket.

Change of venue from the court here was granted after R. Hynson Rogers and J. H. C. Legg, defense counsel, submitted a written plea that their client might not have a fair trial here because of inflamed public sentiment.

Peter and Paul Church here more than 30 years, died last night at Dover, Ohio, where he was pastor of the Catholic church. In addition to his clerical duties while in Cumberland he was an instructor of ecclesiastical students at SS. Peter and Paul Monastery.

For several years he was in charge of the Church of Seven Dolors at Beans Cove, Pa., north of Cumberland, and was also pastor of the churches at Grantsville and Avilton, in Garrett County, Md. After leaving Cumberland, he spent several years in Washington at the Capuchin House of Studies. His funeral will take place at Dover Wednesday morning.

Collection of Art Willed Baltimore

Henry Walters, Late Rail Man, Also Remembers Georgetown U.

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Leaving to the City of Baltimore priceless art treasures and one-quarter of his personal estate estimated "in excess of $10,000,000," the will of the late Henry Walters, railroad magnate, was filed for probate here today.

The Walters Art Gallery, built in 1902 in the center of Baltimore in which was housed a collection valued at more than several million dollars along with his town house adjoining, in which other art objects were kept, were left to the city without restriction.

Harrisonburg Doubles Police in Traffic Drive

Harrisonburg, Va., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Ten special officers were patrolling the streets of Harrisonburg late today in a relentless warfare against traffic law violators, the great majority of whom are city residents. A score of violators have been summoned to appear in mayor's court tomorrow. A dozen were fined $5 and costs today.

The traffic war was inspired by a petition signed by several hundred residents, asking city council to make streets safe for travel. With 10 special officers Harrisonburg now has a force of 16 policemen. Unemployed were favored in the selection of the special officers.

VIRGINIA HIGHWAYS TO GET 12 MILLION

Hearings on Allocations Are Set by Commission After Announcement.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Tentative allocation of highway funds totaling $12,423,040.06 was announced tooday by the State Highway Commission.

From this amound a deduction of $1,623,040 for overhead, engineering, contingencies and surveys and plans was made. Another $1,000,000 was placed in the highway gap closing fund leaving $10,800,000 for allocation to the eight construction districts. Robertson Act Loan deductions are made from the funds allocated to the districts.

The allocations are subject to change following hearings which were announced as follows: At Wytheville, December 17 for Bristol and Salem districts; at Farmville, December 18 for Lynchburg and Richmond districts; at Farmville, December 18 for Lynchburg and Richmond districts; at Williamsburg, December 19, for Fredericksburg and Suffolk districts and at Culpeper, December 21, for Culpeper and Staunton districts.

$500,000 Next Year.

More than half the $1,000,000 gap fund will be expended next year, if the allocation stands, on Route 33, the Valley turnpike, of the total $525,000 is set aside for work from Staunton north, and $150,000 for between Natural Bridge and Fancy Hill. Of the remainder, Salem district gets $150,000 for Route 17 between Fincastle and Clifton Forge, and Culpeper district gets $150,000 Route 28 from Charlottesville north, and $25,000 for the same route from Amherst north.

The total of $12,423,040.60 allocated at this time compares with a total of $11,591,463 distributed at the same time last year and $12,818,260 late in 1929 for 1930 work. The large total for 1930 work is accounted for in part by $1,000,000 taken from surplus in the State treasury and used for repayment of Robertson act loans.

The amounts allocated for road work in the eight districts at the beginning of the three are as follows: 1930, $11,500,000; 1931, $10,000,000; 1932, $10,800,000. This year, however, additional allocations were made during the year when the Federal Government advanced $1,500,000 for road building as a drought relief measure.

Last year the gap fund was divided between four districts as follows: Bristol, $230,000; salem, $200,000; Lynchburg, $270,000, and Staunton, $300,000.

Estimates of Funds.

Walker Is on Way Home From Coast

On Leaving California, He Points Out His Cold Came From East.

Los Angeles, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Mayor James J. Walker, cold and all, left for New York this afternoon after spending two weeks in California, first pleading for the pardon of Tom Mooney and then convalescing from a severe cold. The New York Mayor was careful to explain to Californians he brought the cold with him from the East.

He was in better health as he left than when he came, but Los Angeles physicians told him he should remain in a warm climate for at least ten days.

Frank V. Walsh and John A. Hastings, other counsel for Mooney, accompanied the mayor. A stop will be made at Albuquerque, N. Mex., tomorrow for an hour and 30 minutes for an Indian ceremony, participated in by 26 tribes. The mayor is expected to be made "Chief Big Hear." A four-hour stop will be made at Kansas City Wednesday. He will reach Chicago Thursday and be back in New York Friday.

Rail Unions Work For Shorter Hours

Seek Unemployment Relief Plan Before Studying Wage Reductions.

Chicago, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Railway unions worked today on a permanent program for shorter hours before tackling the emergency problem of reduced wages.

First separately and then together, the four big brotherhoods—engineers, firemen, conductors and trainmen—and the union of switchmen took up the problem of permanent stabilization of employment and the spreading of work through shorter hours per man.

One of the principal proposals was the 6-hour day and although the report of the committee of 35, organized last year, was carefully guarded, many of the leading union executives openly favored the plan. Another day is to be devoted to the attempt to form a definite program regarding shorter hours and to preliminary group conferences before the all important question of wage reducing is taken up by 1,500 general chairmen of railway unions Wednesday.

Driver Injured as Car Overturns on Bridge

A man was seriously hurt and traffic was tied up for about 45 minutes yesterday when the man lost control of his automobile and it overturned on the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge over the Anacostia River.

William Mangum, 60 years old, of 1368 Emerson street northeast, driver of the automobile, was removed to Casualty Hospital in the Casualty ambulance. He was treated for head injuries and shock. Mangum was going east over the bridge when he lost control of his car. It struck the curb at the west end of the bridge and overturned.

BLUEBEARD AND SCENE OF TRIAL

Harry Powers, accused of being the "Bluebeard of Quiet Dell," and the Moore Opera House in Clarksburg, W. Va., where the murder trial opened yesterday.

POWERS UNMOVED AT OPENING OF CLARKSBURG MURDER TRIAL

tails of the most bizarre murder trial this mining section ever had known. Up and down the sidewalks paraded "sandwich men," advertising songs, phonograph records and books about the man West Virginia calls its "bluebeard."

Inside, Judge John C. Southern sat on a raised platform in the middle of the stage with the jury to one side of him, counsel tables slightly down stage and witnesses on the other side.

The glare of 200 "border" lights overhead, lines of papier mache trees on each side of the stage, and a "backdrop" showing a typical small town street, with a church at the judge's back, supplied the setting for the living drama of life or death and love.

Powers, a pudgy little man of 45 with horn-rimmed spectacles, was no longer the dashing Don Juan of the mountains that he pictured himself in letters he sent to scores of women in his Nation-wide "matrimonial correspondence campaign."

As he was led in by a detachment of State troopers, with handcuffs locking his wrists together, and sat for a few moments looking down into the sea of faces that peered up at him, he seemed like a mild-mannered store clerk at a theater performance which held little interest for him.

Powers Does Not Flinch.

As soon as the formalities of opening the trial were over Powers was allowed to sit, without handcuffs, beside Defense Attorney J. Ed Law. He sat for the rest of the day with his back to the audience.

The only time he exhibited any great interest in the proceedings was when the 25 veniremen were being examined. He looked intently into the face of each prospective juror, but when 12 farmers and small-town business men had been selected to decide his fate his interest seemed to lag.

Not even when his lawyer talked of "an attempt to mob the jail and lynch him," and of "some people saying hanging is too good for him," did Powers flinch.

Attorney Law made a motion for a change of venue on the ground that the veniremen had indicated a strong feeling in the community against the defendant. That motion was denied, as well as another to have the jurors taken out of the custody of the sheriff "because of the shameful way he and his deputies treated Powers."

Hanging Is Urged.

Prosecutor Will E. Morris reviewed the case for fifteen minutes. He told how the discovery of Powers' "matrimonial racket," the subterranean death-chamber garage, and the five bodies, was due to information received from Park Ridge, Ill., that Mrs. Asta Buick Eicher and her children had vanished from there with a Clarksburg man.

"The defendant planned to kill this woman (Mrs. Lemke), deliberately and premeditatively, and did killl her, and for profit," the prosecutor said. Then he urged a verdict making hanging mandatory.

Law spoke only one minute, declaring he was convinced the State would not be able to prove its case.

Robbery Across Street Marks Trial of Powers

Special to The Washington Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Dec. 7.—Professional yeggs came to Clarksburg with the Powers murder trial crowds.

Across the street from the Moore Opera House, where the trial is under way, a band of them jimmied into offices of the Chicago Dairy and Banking Co., broke open the safe and escaped with $1,900 in cash and checks just before daylight. Cash in the loot amounted to $1,200.

BRIDGE TEST OPENS HERE ON THURSDAY

Plans Completed for First Annual Tournament of Capital League.

Play in the first annual tournament of the Washington Bridge League for the championship of the District will start Thursday and continue through Friday and Saturday at the Shoreham Hotel. Teams made up of Washington players are invited to participate in the several events.

On Thursday at 2 p. m. the contract pair championship and the open games auction and contract will be held. At 8:30 play in the contract team of four championship will be started and open games auction and contract will be continued.

Friday's schedule calls for the second round of the contract pair championship and open games of auction and contract.

Finals on Saturday.

On Saturday at 2 p. m. the finals in the contract pair championship and the special consolation contract pair game will be played. At 8:30 the contract team of four championship finals will be staged and also the special consolation contract pair game. Open games of auction and contract will be played at both sessions.

E. B. Eynon, president of the Washington Bridge League, has donated a cup for the winners of the contract-team-of-four event. Another cup will be given to the contract pair championship winners. Cups and prizes will also be given to winners in the several consolation games.

All entries must be in the hands of the committee today. A. P. Stockvis is chairman of the tournament committee and may be reached at the Shoreham Hotel.

Mrs. Charles Keene is chairman of the hostess committee. R. E. Needham is tournament manager, and Russell Baldwin will be scorer.

All play will be held in the new ballroom of the Shoreham.

One of the outstanding teams participating in the tournament will be Herbert Brett, of the British Embassy, and Miss Eleanor Wells. The other pair on this team is John Mothershead and Judge Edward Stewart, assistant to the Attorney General.

Daughters to Get Reese's Estate.

Youngstown, Ohio, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The will of John D. (Bonesetter) Reese, filed in probate court here today, leaves the estate to his five daughters. No estimate of its value was given, but a check of properties listed indicates that their value would not exceed $75,000, and probably is considerably less than that.

CAPPER TO INQUIRE INTO HARTMAN CASE

vacancy in the Republican membership in the last session which was not filled.

Senator Charles L. McNary (Republican), of Oregon, is chairman of the committee on committees. He has sent a questionnaire to all members of the Senate asking their committee preferences. Answers have not been received from all senators, however, and a meeting of his committee is not expected to be called by Senator McNary for a few days.

There is yet to be decided the question of proportionate representation the Republicans and the Democrats shall have on the various committees, and until that question is settled the naming of the personnel of the various committees must wait. The Democrats, pointing out that they have 47 members against only 43 Republicans, claim a larger representation on the committees than they had last Congress, when the Republicans had several more seats than they now have.

Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, whose blue gown yesterday was decorated with a bouquet of lilies of the valley and an orchid, presented to her by her husband, will be chairman of the House District committee. Representative Christopher D. Sullivan (Democrat), of New York, ranking Democratic member on the committee, was named on the ways and means committee and must step aside from the District committee chairmanship, which he probably would have done anyway to take the chairmanship of the insular affairs committee.

Democrats of the House are planning to add several members to every committee, enough to give them ample leeway in controlling committee actions, but selection of new committee members probably will not be completed before the end of the week.

HAWKS SEES CAUSE OF DEATH OF BAYLES

wing from the tip to the fuselage, broke. His ship tilted jerkily, as if about to go into a roll. Cutting his motor for a second, Hawks righted his craft and, in his own words, "limped in, although the wing was rather heavy."

"I wouldn't be a bit surprised," he added, "if that's what happened to Lowell Bayles, but my plane was 10,000 feet up when my landing wire broke and I was able to limp in, having the advantage of that altitude.

"Bayles, however, was less than 160 feet off the ground and traveling, presumably, almost 300 miles an hour, and an accident at that altitude such as I had would send the ship into a crash in a fraction of a second."

Both Hawks and airport officials estimated the broken wire cut at least ten minutes off Hawks' time for the trip.

Cleric's Plea Aids Man Who Stole Gold Brick

New York, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—A plea by his pastor won a suspended sentence today for Charles A. Muche, clerk who took a $4,000 gold brick from the United States Assay Office.

The Rev. Charles C. Cain said Muche had a good reputation, and Federal Attorney Medalie said he believed he acted on the impulse. Judge Knox indicated his belief that any one who thought he could take a gold brick from the United States Assay Office and get away with it was naive rather than criminal.

American Clipper Joins U. S.-Havana Air Line

Miami, Fla., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Pan-American Airways officials announced today the huge seaplane, American Clipper, and her sister ship, the Caribbean Clipper, will be put into Miami-Havana service the last of this month. The new schedule will give 26-hours airmail service from New York to Havana.

The planes were built as amphibians and are the largest ships of this type in the world. Their landing gear has been removed, however, to permit carrying heavier pay-loads.

Fox Theaters File Suit To Halt Strike in West

Los Angeles, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Notice from union officials of the calling of a strike of motion picture operators in approximately 350 Fox-West Coast theaters in the Western United States was the signal late today for an application by the theater company to the Superior Court for an injunction prohibiting the walkout locally.

eleven. The four are Dr. R. G. Brindschedla, of Switzerland, vice president and general manager of the credit suisse; Dr. G. Duritch, of Jugoslavia; M. Rydbeck, of Sweden, and Hendrik Colijn, of Holland.

The committee then adjourned until tomorrow to await arrival of Rydbeck and Brindschedlar.

S. Pilotte, of Italy, was named secretary.

Berlin, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Chancellor Henrich Bruening in the next few days will address the people in a radio address with an answer to Adolf Hitler's attacks against his government.

He is awaiting information from Prof. Ludwig Kass, leader of the Centralist party, as to the attitude of the Catholic hierarchy toward Hitler's pledges to rise to power by way of the ballot box. Prof. Kaas, expected back from Rome tonight, will confer with the chancellor.

Are Called Vaporings.

Hitler's statements as to how he will handle reparations and the economic life of the country if and when he comes into authority are described in government circles as "vaporings," and confidence is expressed that Chancellor Bruening will be able to present a good case for his program.

Herr Bruening and members of his cabinet were putting the finishing touches tonight on the latest series of emergency decrees that the government has drafted in a desperate effort to weather the financial storm that broke over the nation in July.

While the contents have not officially been divulged, it is reported that the chancellor has made a determined attempt to reduce wages and prices in conformity. It is understood an effort is being made to reduce wages to the 1927 level and salaries of public service employes will be cut 9 per cent, effective February 1, together with a reduction in disability insurance.

MAJOR LEAGUES PLAN WAR ON RADIO BROADCASTS

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

COMMANDER J. L. HALL, of the Naval Academy athletic staff, commenting on the forthcoming Army-Navy football game in New York and the apparent hopelessness of the Midshipmen's task, sounds a warning to the fans who would predict an easy victory for West Point.

"It was back in 1906 when the Navy went into the annual game under the same conditions that we will this year," said Commander Hall. "The chances seemed to be a thousand to one against us, but we won the game 10 to 0. You can't tell about these service games.

"There was the case of 1913," the commander went on. "Navy had one of its greatest teams; in fact we hadn't lost a game all season or been scored on. We were heavy favorites. Army had just taken a memorable beating from Notre Dame, then practically unknown in the East. The great Notre Dame passing combination of Dorais and Rockne wrecked Army that year. Forward passes were something comparatively new.

"Sure enough, Navy rolled up a 9-point lead against Army that year. And then West Point took the same forward passes that Notre Dame had used to beat them and stopped the Navy cold, scoring three touchdowns and winning the game by a 22 to 9 score. You can't tell about these service games."

Recent agitation for the elimination of tie games by deciding the winner on the general deportment and on the basis of first downs appears ill-conceived in the light of the subterfuges which a team might use to show a margin of superiority.

A team that is fortunate enough to score in the early minutes of the game might very easily show a huge advantage in first downs by choosing to rush the ball from deep in its own territory rather than kick and trust to a "break" in the territory of the opposition.

The making of first downs in a team's own territory is not to be compared with gaining the required distance when the play is beyond midfield. This task becomes increasingly difficult when the opposition is massed on defense and a first down gained under these conditions should merit more consideration than one made from a team's own 30-yard line.

But the injustice of tie scores has been illustrated often enough. This season's most notable case was in the Alabama-Kentucky game which ended in a 6-6 deadlock after Alabama had rolled up eleven first downs to one for Kentucky.

The proposal to reduce the player limit in the major leagues from 25 to 22 or possibly 21 performers on each club is one of the soundest theories advanced by the big league magnates in several seasons.

Several direct benefits will result from the reduction of each club's player lists. The first to feel the advantages would be, of course, the second division clubs, usually hard pressed for talent and well able to use players who are warming the benches of the pace setters for no other reason than that while not good enough to oust a regular, they are too valuable to be cut adrift and can be retained under the generous player limit.

This would make for a better distribution of talent among the eight clubs in the league and would also provide the minor leagues with a new source of supply and thus raise the standard of play in the majors. It would provide, too, an opportunity for players to perform regularly with some team with a chance to show improvement rather than waste the best of their playing years on the bench as understudies to particular stars.

Bierman to Retain Aids at Minnesota

Chicago, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Bernie Bierman will take charge of Minnesota's football destinies as head coach some time in January, he said today after a conference with Athletic Director H. O. "Fritz" Crisler.

"As soon as the Tulane team plays the University of Southern California and I can straighten out my affairs at Tulane, I will leave for my new work," Bierman said.

Crisler announced that Coach Bierman would be assisted by the same staff next year, including Assistants Tad Wilson, Bert Baston, Sig Harris and Frank McCormick.

Bent Shaft Stops Wood's Speed Trial

Miami Beach, Fla., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Gar Wood streaked his Miss America IX through the water at an unofficial speed of 100 miles an hour late today, but bent a propellor shaft while doing it. Further tests of the boat prior to an assault on the 110-mile world's speedboat record now held by Kaye Don of England, will be delayed pending installation of a new shaft, Wood said.

The racer kept his own time as he made one test run southbound on the measured mile course of Indian Creek. Vibration of the boat became so great during the last part of the run that Wood stopped for an inspection and found the bent shaft.

Bierman Will Retain Aids at Minnesota

Chicago, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Tad Wieman will remain at Minnesota as football line coach, Director of Athletics H. C. "Fritz" Crisler said today after a conference with Bernie Bierman, newly appointed head coach of the Gophers.

"The staff will remain the same except that Bierman will replace me as head coach," Crisler said. "We will have Wieman back as line coach, Bert Baston as end coach, Sig Harris as coach of the freshmen and Frank McCormick as an assistant."

Bierman, who coached Tulane's big green wave to its highest football crest this fall, was enthusiastic about his new job and "very happy to get back home." He starred with the Gophers in 1913, '14 and '15.

D. C. Colleges Prepare for Saturday

Georgetown, Catholic and G. W. Squads in Grid Drills.

Alabama Will Face Primed Teams in Charity Show.

FOOTBALL squads of George Washington, Catholic and Georgetown Universities, at full strength, braved yesterday's biting winds to begin final intensive preparation for the unemployment benefit triple-header with Alabama's Rose Bowl champions of 1930, scheduled next Saturday in Griffith Stadium.

With chilling blasts sweeping their respective fields, the Colonials, Cardinals and Hilltoppers cavorted for more than an hour to the tune of coaches' exhortations. It was as if the impending event meant everything in the lives of the players, so enthusiastic were their actions but, as a matter of fact, they are seriously looking ahead for the three 20-minute contests with the common opponent which will determine the moot question as to which of the trio is strongest.

Injured stars of George Washington and Georgetown are expected to return to action in this mammoth and most novel football extravaganza. George Washington will regain the services of Johnny Fenlon, brilliant little quarter back, who suffered a leg injury in the North Dakota game on Thanksgiving Day, while Georgetown is to benefit from the return of Mack Stanley, ace kicker and fast running half back, whose ankle was badly sprained in the Villanova contest of November 21.

C. U. Squad in Top Form.

Catholic University's squad is in fine fettle for the fray and is perfecting some new plays especially designed for use against the Alabamians. The latter will use the plays taught them last year by Coach Wallace Wade, who transferred to Duke University after he led the Crimson Tide to a 24-0 victory over Washington State in the Rose Bowl classic.

Bus Sheary, barrel-chested full back, was named yesterday to captain the Cardinals in the charity game. Sheary had the honor of captaining the Brooklanders in their opening contest against Boston College. He has been a reliable, effective performer throughout the season.

Some of Georgetown's players will participate in a regular game today by way of preparing for the Alabamans' invasion. This is the annual Sophomore-Freshmen clash, known as the "Battle of Caps," which will be held in Griffith Stadium this afternoon, beginning at 1:45 o'clock. Tommy Carolan, Mickey Lione and Joe Katalinas, varsity players, will appear in the Sophomore line-up.

Children's Tickets Popular.

The game committee's special offer of 50-cent bleacher seats for children under 16 years of age caused an appreciable boost in the advance sale yesterday at the stadium and at Spalding's, 1338 G street northwest, where the main distribution of pasteboards for the event is being conducted. This offer holds good until Thursday night.

Regular prices of tickets are as follows: General admission, $1.50; reserved seats, $2.00, and box seats, $2.50. A large number of choice sideline seats at $1.50 each are still available, the committee announced last night. The students of the local universities involved will be seated in the sideline stands.

The Alabama squad, eight of whom played last Saturday when the Tide trounced Chattanooga, 39 to 0, in a benefit game in the Tennessee city, will arrive on Thursday for the first of two practices in Griffith Stadium. Thursday's workout, beginning at 2:30 p. m., will be open to the public. They will drill secretly on Friday.

Sington Prominent In Invasion.

Most prominent of an all-star cast which Coaches Thomas and Crisp are bringing here is Big Fred Sington, 210-pound tackle who was unanimously chosen for the All-American team last year. Sington is a veritable terror on both offense and defense, but, as Coach Pixlee, of George Washington stated yesterday, "everybody is going to take a shot at Sington." Incidentally, George Washington's offensive repertoire features an off-tackle smash, and the Colonial mentor declared that it will be used against Sington's sector of the line without consideration of his great past performances.

Fair weather is the long distance prediction for Saturday.

Cops Claim College Aces for Joliet Game

Evanston, Ills., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Evanston will give odds on its coppers when and if they meet the convicts of Stateville next season on the gridiron of the State Penitentiary at Joliet.

Word of a challenge from the prisoners reached Chief William O. Freeman, of Evanston, today, and his answer was a chuckle as he looked over his roster:

"Bill Calderwood, half back, Northwestern University.

"Ed Cohen, half back, Northwestern.

"Herman (Duke) Cohen, guard, Northwestern.

"Then there's 'Pug' Rentner and Ollie Olson," said the chief, "if Coach Hanley will let them play with us. And we'll use the Freeman system, not the Rockne or Warner.

"Sure, they're coppers. They're earning their way through school as special policemen!"

Grid's Contribution to Needy To Top Million Dollar Mark

NEW YORK, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The million-dollar mark in charity football gate receipts will be touched this week, spokesmen for the President's committee on mobilization of unemployment relief disclosed today.

This includes the assurance of a "gate" of at least $400,000 for the year's greatest charity spectacle, the Army-Navy classic, this Saturday in the Yankee Stadium. If it is a complete sell-out, the service battle may draw close to $450,000.

The President's committee anticipates the final tabulation on football's contribution to charity will reach $1,500,000 with reports still to be made and games to be played, including the Rose Bowl classic New Year's Day between Southern California and Tulane.

The charity funds were given a big increase Saturday when receipts reached approximately $66,500 from Tennessee's victory over New York University, and the Carnegie Tech-Duquesne tie netted $30,000. The total for the day was about $220,000.

Although reports are lacking on many games and actual receipts are estimated for the most part, the following list indicates how the various elevens have attracted the charity, together with a few of this week's prospects:

Western Conference games	$260,000
Lehigh-Penn State	8,000
Oklahoma City-Oklahoma	20,000

GRID CENTER SWINGS TO SOUTH

Georgia, Tulane Bear Section's Hopes in Far West.

By DIXON STEWART.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—If Georgia and Tulane fulfil announced intentions of defeating Southern California in games scheduled in the Pasadena Rose Bowl Saturday and New Year's Day, respectively, the Far West will be forced to abandon its claim of producing the Nation's finest football.

Southern teams already boast an enviable record in intersectional competition in the Far West, having been represented in four of the last six Tournaments of Roses games without meeting defeat, and if Georgia and Tulane succeed in prolonging the winning streak it will be time to admit that the South leads all other sections.

The question of sectional leadership has been in dispute for many years, with the balance of power moving successively from East to Midwest and on to the Coast. Until recently, the South's claim for recognition drew little attention, but a victory by Georgia Tech and two victories and a tie by Alabama in Tourney of Roses games gave the South high ranking.

Southern Teams Successful.

During the present season Southern teams met with exceptional success in intersectional competition and at present the University of Tulane at New Orlean's is the Nation's only major undefeated and untied team. With Tulane generally conceded national championship honors, Georgia, which was beaten only by Tulane, and Tennessee, whose record is marred only by a tie against Kentucky, also hold ranking among national leaders.

Georgia, ranked behind Tulane and Tennessee in its own sector, plays Southern California, coast champion, Saturday in the season's first test between the rival sections and is conceded an even chance of victory.

Southern California has swept over all foes, including Notre Dame, since its setback by St. Mary's in the season's opener, but will have no easy time Saturday. Georgia will match the Westerners in All-American candidates with Quarter Back Austin Downs and "Catfish" Smith, end, pitted against Shaver, U. S. C.'s All-American quarter back, and Baker, the Californians great guard.

Game Attracts National Interest.

The game is attracting national interest as the first test between the Far West and the South, but is even more important as a test of what Southern California may be expected to accomplish in the Tourney of Roses game on New Year's Day.

Tulane, playing its best football of the season, romped to a 20-to-7 victory over Georgia at Athens last month. With Tulane scheduled to play U. S. C. in the annual Rose Bowl charity feature, Tulane scouts will be in the stands Saturday and U. S. C.'s success against Georgia undoubtedly will guide Tulane preparations for the New Year's classic.

"Battle of Caps" At Stadium Today

Georgetown Frosh Eleven Meets Sophs for Right to Discard Caps.

Fast, hard-fought football should be on tap this afternoon at Griffith Stadium, if tradition and history is indicative, when the Sophomores and Freshmen of Georgetown University meet in their annual "Battle of Caps," starting at 1:45 o'clock. Seldom has one of these tussles failed to produce a game chock full of thrills.

The Sophomores, coached by Maurice Dubofsky, the Hilltop's great guard, will line up as follows: Carolan and O'Rourke, ends; J. Katalinas and Konopka, tackles; Hosey and Walacavage, guards; Callahan, center; Lone, quarter back; Carpenter and Small, half backs, and Trump, full back.

Coach Frank Kersjes' Freshmen will be arrayed in this order: Carpone and S. Alenty, ends; Sawaya and Dawner, tackles; Mariskey and Cohen, guards; Bello, center; Saverini, quarter back; Herron and Pagiucia, half backs, and Chappa, full back.

The Sophomores, led by Ray Hudson, present varsity end luminary, defeated the Freshmen last year, 13 to 7.

GRID SCORING LOWEST IN 10 YEARS

Average Only 14.16 Points Per Game; 16 in 1930.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The lowest football scoring record in the ten years during which such statistics have been kept by the Associated Press was made this year by 156 representative university and college teams.

The 156 teams, providing a good cross section of the intercollegiate football world, played 1,374 contests and rolled up a total of 19,454 points. This produced a team average for the season of 124.7 points and an average per game of 14.16 points. Last year 152 teams averaged 137 points for the season and 16 per game for the highest mark since 1922.

Individual Records Also Fall.

As the general average dropped, so did the individual records. Colgate and Southern California amassed 383 and 382 points, respectively, last year, while Davis and Elkins, this year's leader, scored only 345, with U. S. C. seventh and on the list with 270 points, and Colgate showing only 227.

Alabama was second this year with 340 points gathered in 10 games for an average of 34, three points higher than Davis and Elkins but only one above Utah, which compiled 301 points in nine games for an average of 33. Tulane scored 338 points in 11 games for an average of 30.

Iowa usurped the place at the bottom of the list, held last year by Hobart. The Hawkeyes scored only seven points in eight games, and those seven in their one winning effort against George Washington University. Iowa also played a scoreless tie with Indiana.

Hobart retained its place as major victim, however, with 276 points scored against it by eight opponents.

Notre Dame, in winning six games, losing two and playing a scoreless tie with Northwestern, amassed only 215 points this year as compared to 265 last year.

De-Emphasis Blamed for Grid Toll

Opponents of Spring, Early Fall Drills Hit by Meehan.

Removal of Kick-Off Hazard Seen Necessary in Future.

By EDWARD J. NEIL.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—John F. (Chick) Meehan, president of the American Football Coaches Association, linked the de-emphasizing of football today to the toll of 40 lives, taken on gridirons all over the country this fall.

Football, he believes, can get along just as well without the kick-offs that permit a receiving eleven to form the dangerous "wedge" formation ahead of the player returning the ball. He is in favor of the elevated tee or any other modification that might remove some of the hazards of the sport. But he would like, too, to bring out further facts.

"Elimination of spring practice in some schools, late starting in others, in fact all this deemphasizing of football, have contributed largely to the accidents this fall," said Meehan. "The result is a situation terribly unfair to the boys themselves.

Usual Agitation Starts After Season.

"After the season always comes the agitation to take away the overemphasis from football. Elimination of spring practice is a favorite cure-all. Late starting of practice in the fall another.

"Now spring practice is just a lot of fun. The coaches and the players fool around a great deal. They work only on fundamentals, tackling and blocking. There is no pressure. If a player is hurt he can rest. There is no rushing him to doctors, spraying him with lights and rays to get him ready for a big game on Saturday.

"The fact that most of the fatalities and serious injuries this fall happened in sand lot games among novices only proves that the boys who play football in colleges need more, not less training and drilling in fundamentals. Rarely is a player hurt if he tackles and blocks properly. It is only when he is unschooled in these fundamentals or too impetuous that he tackles out of position, blocks out of position, and lays himself open to violent injury.

Play Hard Despite Lack of Preparation.

"What happens to these same boys who had had no spring practice and who start late when the fall rolls around? They play the same hard schedules. They go into games just as hysterical, just as desperate to win as if they had the long drills in fundamentals. They play just as hard but without the proper background of conditioning and teaching.

"That is absolutely unfair to the boys. Deemphasis has been accomplished at the cost of lives and severe injuries. Football is a hard, rugged game. There can be no such thing as too much care, too much attention, too much emphasis in preparing them for it."

Livsey and Lauri Win In Title Cue Tourney

Philadelphia, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Spencer Livsey, Los Angeles, defeated Robert Lindblom, Seattle, 125-104, in the first of the afternoon games today in the World's Pocket Billiard Championship Tournement. The match ran 44 innings.

Livsey had a high run of 27 and Lindblom's best cluster was 23.

Onofrio Lauri, of Brooklyn, defeated Andy Ponzi, of Philadelphia, 125-95, in the other afternoon match. Lauri won in 18 innings.

Mandell Followed Fight Trail Into Discard After Style of Greats of Game

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Special to The Washington Post.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Was it Sammy Mandell who used to tell me when he was young and a champion that he never would be found hanging around the promoters' offices after he was through, and wasn't that the same Sammy Mandell, ex-champion of lightweights, who fought some apprentice and couldn't handle him, in a preliminary bout a short time ago?

What ails these washed-up prize fighters, these Dempseys and Leonards, these Berlenbachs and Al Singers, that when they are obviously over the hill and pretty far down the other side, they insist on coming back or plugging along to humiliate themselves? Did their investments go wrong, were they hit too hard and too often on the head, or is there some irresistible fascination in the smells and sounds, the punch and parry, the excitement and risk of which Leonard, in an unguarded moment, described as the "dirtiest game?"

McLarnin Fight Was Epic.

Mandell was not the greatest lightweight champion, and the truth is that a certain boyish manner, best to be described as "nice" passed for a superior brand of intelligence in his case. But his fight with Jimmy McLarnin at the Polo Grounds was one of the greatest boxing feats of his generation and he was, on that particular night, as great as Leonard at his best. And granting that he was not one of the great minds of his time, he always did seem a little more sensible than most fighters, more aware that his time would come and more likely to quit and stay out when some young fellow punched him over.

That happened more than a year ago when Singer beat him to the floor and took his title in a fight obscured by murky circumstances at the Yankee Stadium. Sammy and his elderly friend, Teddy Bodkin, claimed he had been drugged and one of Sammy's attendants brought a pestiferous lawsuit against a paper for alluding to the claim. The asking price in the suit was $100,000, the closing price was $400 and the sensitive sportsman whose fair name was rehabilitated for a 50-50 share of the settlement fee has not been embarrassed by mention in the papers since then.

Contend he was Drugged.

However, Sammy and Bodkin claimed the champion was dazed when he entered the ring and attributed this to some potion, whereas the fact probably was that he had suffered too much from previous beatings and toiling and sweating to reach a subnormal weight.

At any rate, he was obviously all through that night, and having been frugal and very domestic for years, a

TULANE STAR IS SENT TO HOSPITAL

Dalrymple Victim of Kidney Injury in Saturday Game.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Physicians had Jerry Dalrymple, Tulane football captain, and all-American end, under observation in a hospital today because of a kidney injury received in Saturday's game with Washington State. He was stricken suddenly Sunday while driving his automobile in McComb, Miss., with Miss Dorothy Benedict, of New Orleans. He was put to bed there by Dr. Robert H. Brumfield, but was sent to New Orleans by train today and placed in the hospital.

Physicians said that time only would tell the seriousness of his condition, but that similar cases had been known to clear up without ill effects.

Jerry laughed and joked about his illness and said he would be in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena playing right end against Southern California New Year's Day in as good condition as ever.

Injured While Blocking "Turk" Edwards.

"Sure, I'll play," he grinned. "This will clear up in about a week and I'll be as good as ever."

Dalrymple said he received the injury on the second kick-off of the Tulane-Washington State game when he attempted to block big "Turk" Edwards, Washington State's star and last year's All-American tackle.

"That's a hard man to meet when you and he are both going full speed," said Dalrymple. "But I did not think anything of it. It didn't bother me any until Sunday afternoon, when my back began to hurt me pretty badly."

The absence of Dalrymple in the line-up in the Rose Bowl game would be a serious loss to the Tulane Green Wave, which counts on his brilliant end play and his rallying power over his teammates.

British Motorboat Challenger Planned

London, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Lord Wakefield announced tonight the speedboat, Miss England II, soon will be replaced by the Miss England III, which will combine certain features which Kaye Don believes will make for even greater speed. Don set the present world's record of 110.223 miles an hour in Italy this year with the Miss England II.

"Don and other experts think certain modifications will give the pilot greater control and greater safety at high speeds," said Lord Wakefield, "and I am of the opinion that the vessel, in its new form, will maintain the record against any possible challengers."

The Miss England II will not be scrapped but will be held in reserve.

Football Abolition Urged in Editorial

40 Deaths Cited by College Paper at Columbia; Profits Charged.

New York, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—A football death toll which has grown to 40 for the 1931 season, today prompted Spectator, Columbia student daily, to urge abolition of the game as an intercollegiate sport.

In an editorial titled "death stalks over the gridiron" Spectator charges the game now is played largely for the entertainment of the spectators and the profit of the coaches and "other parasites."

Spectator recently attracted attention when it charged football with being a "semi-professional racket." An editorial that led to threats of bodily harm against its editor, Reed Harris. Two Columbia football players promised to punch him in the nose, if he carried any more similar editorials.

INTERCITY RING BOUTS.

New York, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—Sixteen New York amateur boxers, winners in the recent pre-Olympic meet, have been named to face teams from Philadelphia and Boston in a two-night intercity tournament at Madison Square Garden, December 14 and 16.

NAVY AERIAL DRILL FOR ARMY

Tars Expected to Go to Air Against Old Rivals Saturday.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 7.—Fired and encouraged by their victory over University of Pennsylvania Saturday, Navy Varsity football squad, half a hundred strong, got down to serious business this afternoon as they resumed activity in preparation for the climax of the 1931 season, the supreme test with the rival West Point Cadets, arranged as a charity benefit, and to be staged in the Yankee Stadium, New York, on Saturday.

Today's program was the first of four for the gridders before they depart for New York late Thursday afternoon. The squad will go into quarters at the Westchester Biltmore Country Club, at Rye, and following the game Navy headquarters will be at the Hotel Commodore, where the middies of the regiment, who will not leave here until early Saturday morning, will be quartered, to remain over night.

Hurley Likely to Start as Full Back.

And as Head Coach Edgar E. (Rip) Miller intimated a week ago that Tom Hurley would be his choice for full back for the Army game, this veteran of three seasons, whose early season work was handicapped by illness that he suffered during the summer, was in the line-up with the big team when it took the field for a workout, "Jimmy" Campbell has been at the post in practically every game this season, and the change, if Miller does make it permanent, will not be because Campbell has not shown keen aggressiveness and in every way performed his task well, but Hurley has shown marked improvement, is heavier and, it is believed, can better stand the gaff of a hard battle. Moreover, Hurley is a New York City lad, and it is felt that, playing in his own back yard, he should be at his best. Hurley will be playing his last game, as he is a member of the graduating class of next June. Campbell is a junior.

Although "Bert" Davis, regular quarter back, is able to leave the Naval Hospital, where he has been under treatment for bronchitis for nearly two weeks, doubt is expressed whether he will be able to take part in Saturday's battle. "Sammy" Moncure, Alexandria, Va., lad, his understudy, who did such a good job in the Penn game, continued to work out with the team and there is not any question but that he will direct play against Army, if Davis is not entirely fit. "Buck" James, of Hyattsville, Md., who learned his football at Central High, Washington, also was in his old position at left tackle, replacing McCrea. The rest of the team was intact as it faced the Quakers.

Tars Improving in Aerial Game.

Today's practice session of the big team was limited almost entirely to aerial tactics, in which department they have shown decided improvement, and which may be their chief offensive weapon for use against the Cadets. There was no scrimmage session, but the second and third stringers mixed it up in lively style against the Plebes and Squad B shock troops, respectively. Beck directed the work of the reserves, and the rest of the back field consisted of Fleck, Chung Hoon and Waybright, a fast combination. The coldest weather of the season greeted the players as they took to the field late to practice, under flood lights, following the usual Monday lecture by Coach Miller. A brisk northwest wind swept Thompson Field, which interfered greatly with the passing.

Enthusiasm borne down through the years pervades the regiment of midshipmen as the big game approaches and at every formation today, for classes or otherwise, the shout of "One, two, three, four; beat West Point," as the students swung into "fours right or fours left." Signs and legends directing attention to the game are to be seen here and there, and it was reported tonight that the students are on the verge of giving "Old Tecumseh," a bronze recast of the old figurehead of the Delaware, known among the

Cut in Player Limit Also Looms

Reduction From 25 to 22 Is Favored by Lower Clubs.

Radio Is Blamed for Smaller Crowds; May Pay Fee.

By PAUL MICKELSON.

CHICAGO, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Major league club owners broadcast threatening notes to radio stations and baseball's bench warmers tonight as they gathered in Chicago for their three-day business session.

From almost every club owner it was learned that two of the most important proposals before the meetings concerned the radio and the bench warmers—the radio through a move to ban broadcasting from all major league parks or to levy a rental charge on them for the privilege and the extras through a plan to cut the player limit from 25 to 22 or even 21.

Second-division Clubs Favor Plan.

Second-division clubs were strong for the plan to reduce the player limit because it would ultimately give them access to the many players they could use on the field themselves, furthermore they figured that if every club would reduce its squad from 25 to 22 men each league would save approximately $120,000 in salaries alone, basing the estimate on the assumption that the average baseball salary is around the $5,000-a-year mark, even including the bench warmers.

The radio attack, brewing several years, was brought to a climax by the Western Union Telegraph Co., which has paid a large sum each year for exclusive press wire privileges. The Western Union complained the radio stations had refused to reimburse it and that broadcasts seriously interfered with its business. Several club owners also were known to be opposed to broadcasting, notably those having interests in minor league clubs, which have complained broadcasts keep fans away from their parks so they can hear the play-by-play of major league games.

Salary Reductions Proposed.

At the minor league meeting last week at West Baden, Ind., it was proposed that each major league club charge a sizable sum for broadcasting rights and lump the proceeds into a fund to help minor league clubs in financial distress. That proposal, however, received but little interest among their big brothers of baseball today.

Another proposal before the club owners was a movement to reduce salaries, although it was almost certain that no set maximum would be set. Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, was one of the chief objectors to the proposal on the theory that players' salaries should be left up to each club owner.

The National League may change its baseball to make it uniform with that used in the American League. The difference between the two is that the National League ball's cover is 0.005 of an inch thicker than the American League sphere.

Rumors of player deals floated about the hotel lobby thicker than ever tonight with the Cubs the pivotal point of National League rumors and the White Sox, Yankees and Cleveland the rumor centers in the American. One apparently reliable report had the Cubs and Cincinnati at terms in a deal for Hack Wilson, while the White Sox admitted they were ready for anything and that they had just started in to swap players.

Racing News Bureau Draws Fine of $10,000

Baltimore, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The General News Bureau, Inc., alleged disseminator of race handbook information, was fined $10,000 by Judge Eugene O'Dunne in criminal court today for contempt of court in refusing to submit its records for scrutiny.

William Burke, Washington, and Morris A. Schwartz, Brooklyn, N. Y., alleged Baltimore agents for the News Bureau, also were presented by the grand jury for failing to obtain a permit to operate in Maryland in violation of the State corporation laws.

Judge O'Dunne ordered an investigation of the various racing information bureaus by the grand jury.

The news bureau two weeks ago was fined $2,500 for failure to give Judge O'Dunne a record of its telephone connections. It was alleged the bureau furnished information to scores of bookmakers throughout the city, on which they carried on horse race betting.

PINEHURST DOG TRIALS.

Pinehurst, N. C., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Twelve brace of the 48 dogs entered in the $1,000 opening all-age stakes of the Pointer Club of America worked today.

C. D. Johdan, of Monticello, Ga., and Henry P. Davis, of Memphis, Tenn., the judges, expressed the belief that the coursing can be concluded by tomorrow night.

Today's weather was ideal for the event, and many coveys of quail were flushed.

RUBBERNECK, LONGEST SHOT OF MEET, WINS AT JEFFERSON

Gelding Pays 82-1 Odds In Sixth

Beats Herendeen by Head; Hazel Denson Pays 74-1.

Record Price, $1,445, Hung Up on $2.00 Daily Double.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Long-shot players had their day at Jefferson Park today when four rank outsiders passed the judges' stand in front of their respective fields. J. Denquelo's Rubberneck led the parade of long shots, winning the sixth race over a mile and 70 yards and paying $165.60 for a $2 mutuel ticket. It was the longest-priced winner of the meeting.

M. Deatherage's Hazel Denson spread-eagled her field in the third and returned $147.60 for a similar-priced ticket. The Elktonia Stable's Forget Not earned a nose decision in the opener to pay off at $95.60 for $2, while E. E. Major's Robina Seth captured the closing event at odds of 26 to 1.

As the result of Hazel Denson's victory and the triumph of Deceptive, which paid $11.40, the daily double paid its largest dividend of the meeting—$1,445.40 for a $2 ticket. Only one person, a woman, held a ticket on the winning combination.

7-Year-Old Mare Cops at Long Price.

Rubberneck, which campaigned over New York tracks this season, lasted to beat Herendeen by a head. Gold Handle was third, two lengths away. Lucky Drift held a long early lead, but collapsed in the final furlong and Rubberneck took command, outlasting Herendeen when the latter challenged. Herendeen was best in the race, but got off last and made up a world of ground. Gold Handle also came from many lengths back.

The second longest priced winner of the meeting materialized when Deatherage's 7-year-old mare, Hazel Denson, made her eleven rivals look bad in the third event to return $147.60 for $2. Hazel Denson, ridden by the local rider, J. Hernandez, scored with six lengths to spare over Beautiful Doll with Sour Mash, favorite, third. Hazel Denson took command right after the break and, opening up a wide lead, never was threatened. Beautiful Doll ran a powerful race, coming from many lengths back to take the place.

The West End Purse, a gallop of 1 1-16 miles, for 3-year-olds and upward, featured the card. Bill Looney carried the green and white silks of Ed Haughton to an easy victory, flashing past the judges four lengths before E. B. Carpenter's Tony Joe. Totem lost the place by six lengths. The winner ran the distance over a drying out track in 1:50 flat and was favorite, paying $6.60 for $2.

It was Bill Looney's race from flag fall to finish. Well handled by Jockey R. Fischer, the gelding easily maintained a safe lead all the way under snug restraint. Toney Joe, weakly handled, was no match for the winner, but always held the place position without effort. Totem made a bid around the bend, but could never make up ground on the leaders.

Forget Not Wins in Blanket Finish.

A blanket finish brought the spectators to their feet in the curtain raiser, a dash of 6 furlongs for 3-year-olds. The Elktonia Stable's Forget Not emerged the winner by a nose and paid the luscious price of $95 60 for a $2 ticket. Dry Dock and Halliard finished noses apart as named behind the winner. Forget Not was easily best, but lost a great deal of ground going wide turning for home. My Inver, which wound up fourth, had a rough trip through the stretch.

Deceptive showed a smart effort to lead home a large band of juveniles in the second race, scoring by a length and a half over Noah's Pride, while the latter defeated Makanda by three lengths for the place. Deceptive, a son of Upset, the colt that gave the immortal Man o' War his only licking, followed Escoba Land's early pace and went to the front in the stretch to draw clear. Noah's Pride came with a rush on the inside and was an easy second. Deceptive paid $11.40.

Dick Morris, from the stable of Knebelkamp & Morris, gave favorite players their first victory in the fourth event, another 6-furlong affair, which attracted nine sprinters. Under a hustling ride by C. Landolt, the gelding never gave his backers anxiety and rewarded them with $8.20 for $2. Whileaway took the place, with Grand Prince third. Shackelford was first to break, but Dick Morris and Princess Peroxide quickly took command.

Dick Morris Draws Away To Easy Win.

After a brief duel, Dick Morris drew into a safe lead around the bend and the Princess dropped out of it. Whileaway, always close up, finished courageously, but was beaten. A length farther back, Grand Prince took the show after coming from fifth position.

Robina Seth, paying $54.80, just toyed with her field in the nightcap, scoring by ten lengths after leading all the way. Rocky Way was second with Harpoon third.

—Jefferson Park Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

JEFFERSON PARK RACE TRACK, Dec. 7.—High class sprinters have been named to contest the outstanding event on the program at Jefferson Park tomorrow. This number, fifth on the card, received a list of eight eligibles to match strides over the 6-furlong distance for the $900 purse. The track was drying out this morning and the races were expected to be run over a slow strip.

In the outstanding event GRACIOUS GIFT, a highly regarded speedster, which has carried the F. S. Carpenter colors to victory at this track, is favored to score his second triumph. The Whiskbroom 2d gelding is nicely weighted with 103 pounds and figures to outfoot this field. C. V. Whitney's SMEAR, which has displayed ability over a slow track, is the place selection, with PROMETHEUS as the show possibility.

FIRST RACE—POLYP has raced consistently in recent efforts and should graduate from the maiden ranks. PRINCE TOMMY and FLORISMART have trained well over this course and should do well against this band.

SECOND RACE—OVERBOARD showed a clever performance last start to finish second to King Cherokee and oft that effort is selected to show the way to his rivals. THOMAS SETH was poorly ridden in his last and with better handling may be hard to beat. COCKRILL would favor a route but, however, has enough speed to gain a part of the purse.

THIRD RACE—GERTRUDE READE is favored to gain the honors. This clever filly from the R. H. Dohle string has shown improvement in previous efforts and against this field should experience little difficulty. SIS ESTHER and TRANSGRESSION are closely rated and figure to share the remainder of the purse.

FOURTH RACE—A. Pelleteri's consistent plater, SIGN OFF, winner of his last, is at the top of his form and appears a standout. Chief opposition should be furnished by NICK CULLOP. This Canadian campaigner has raced well over a route and will have PUNKIE to beat for the place. The latter improving and should last to gain the show.

SIXTH RACE—KING HAIMA, from the B. Bagley Stable, is the logical choice. MARABOU disappointed last start but is capable of a better performance. ITSO showed a return to form the other day and is the show selection.

SEVENTH RACE—Mrs. J. Sawyer's clever performer, SPORTING BLUES, a recent winner, appears best of his rivals. OLD BILL, a steady plater, is given the place call, with PRINCESS DARE favored over the others.

Eastern High to Honor Grid Stars Thursday

Eastern High's gridiron players will be honored Thursday night at a banquet which will be the highlight of an evening which also is the date of the Parent-Teacher Association of the school. The dramatic society of the school will present several acts, and among the speakers are Charles Hart, principal of the school; Mike Kelley, grid and track coach, and Chuck Guyon, basket ball and baseball instructor.

MANDELL IN PUGILISTIC TAILSPIN

Follows Long Line of Game's Ex-Greats Into Discard.

milk drinker and a nonspender in his social habits, he was supposed to have at least 60 per cent of the first dollar he ever made and of all subsequent dollars up to and including the last one. Instead of withdrawing to his suburban cottage in Rockford, Ill., however, he quarreled with Eddie Kane, his old manager, who soon got pneumonia and died, almost broke. Then after a short interval, Sammy came back to fight as a welterweight.

His subsequent fights have confirmed the demonstration performed by Al Singer that evening in the Yankee Stadium. Wear and tear, something, whatever it is that suddenly cancels fighters in their prime, had done for Sammy Mandell, but still he continues to try to fight, even in preliminary bouts, which can not pay him much.

Eddie Kane Always His Apologist.

There are friends of the late Eddie Kane who might be glad to pay high grade prices to sit in at these preliminaries to see Mandell fall. The little pale, spendthrift, gambler, almsgiver, and fight manager, Eddie Kane, carried the target for Mandell wherever he went. Mandell was such a champion as needed an apologist, and Kane was always on the defensive, explaining away mediocre fights and exploiting the boy's pleasant character.

"I tell you," Mr. Kane would say, "he is not a prize fighter by nature. The minute a fight is over he ducks for a train and home. He gets up in the middle of the night to warm the bottle for the baby. He mows his own lawn. It's all I can do to get him away from home to fight when I book some business for him. You will never see Sammy Mandell hanging around to get his head knocked out of shape once he losses that title. Saves his money; has plenty of good investments; crazy about his home life"—and all the rest of a familiar piece.

Sammy Was Trusting, Innocent Kid.

I have never heard the reason why Mandell pulled away from Kane, but certainly the quarrel disrupted one of the most incongruous combinations of men. Kane, sick and skinny, did the necessary social drinking and all-night staying up as well as the general manager of the troupe. Bodkin, an amusing old fat man who professed to worship Sammy with an unselfish, fatherly love, was always present in the training camps to select Sammy's steaks and personally wash and cook the food. Sammy was the trusting, innocent juvenile protege of both and all seemed to be harmony and complete confidence.

But when Sammy was training for the Singer fight Kane seemed unwelcome in the camp, and when the fight was over Bodkin became the manager. Then, after some time, when Kane had died, Sammy and Bodkin disagreed and Sammy went down and down to the preliminaries, this rich, joyous, home-loving kid, who had only been waiting for the time when he could quit the business and spend all his time at home with his family.

I can hear him yet saying, many a time, "Never me to hang around and get punched up by a lot of tough, strong kids when I am through. I'm putting my dough away, and when my time is up they can have the title and the racket, and any one who wants to see Sammy Mandell will have to come to Rockford, Ill."

youths as the "God of 2.5" the passing mark in examinations, a daub of red paint, or enshrouding it in red in some fashion. And while the players were at practice, a large contingent of the Middies organized a jazz band and marched to the field. Later there was a cheering session, in spite of the biting weather.

Cadets Watch Gridmen In Drill at West Point

West Point, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Enthused over the forthcoming clash with the Navy, cadets crowded the sidelines here today as Army's football squad went through a light workout despite frequent flurries of snow.

Attired in sweat clothes the players went through a series of calisthenics and then moved over to the scrimmage machines where two teams worked on polishing plays.

Bill Frentzel, back, was the only player who did not appear for practice. He is in the cadet hospital with a bad cold. Stecker, Summerfelt, Kilday and Carver watched the heavy work from the sidelines but are expected to occupy their regular positions in tomorrow's defensive drill.

At the close of the session, Maj. Sasse assembled the squad and had the coaches who scouted the Navy in the Penn game give their impression of the Tars. The playing of Tuttle, Nevy center, particularly impressed Army scouts and Roy Evans, Army center, apparently is in for a busy afternoon on Saturday.

Tremendous signs bearing the inscription "sink the Navy" appeared today in the central area and more will be displayed in the next few days. Plans for an athletic rally of the cadets, later this week, are being made.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix

IF all the Smiths ever get together, it's going to be a big day. There are over 122,000,000 people in the United States, and at least one out of every hundred is named Smith. The percentage is really greater than that. To be more exact, there are just about 1,430,000 Smiths.

Smithtown!

Imagine it. A city with nearly 200,000 greater population than the city of Los Angeles. A city larger than Boston, Detroit, Cleveland, St. Louis or Pittsburgh! A city almost as big as Philadelphia. Smithtown would be the fourth largest city in the United States.

Conceive a town where there would be Smith avenues, Smith streets, Smith boulevards, highways, lanes and alleys. A town full of blacksmith Smiths, goldsmith Smiths, silversmith Smiths, tinsmith Smiths . . . and just ordinary Smiths. And think how many Smith brothers there would be.

Al Smiths would be all over town, and Bill Smiths would be everywhere. But try to find the telephone number of a friend named John . . . there would be no less than 50,000 John Smiths!

Baltimore High Five On Tech's List Dec. 21

Forest Park High, crack Baltimore scholastic basket ball team, has been added to the schedule of Tech. The Baltimoreans will be met December 21 at Tech.

Coach Artie Boyd has worked the big Tech squad down to a group of twenty and will cut loose five more players this week. The first line squad will have Russell, Reichard, Wheeler and Gregario for forwards; Diverson, center, and Thomas and Capt. Willison, guards.

Tech opens its season next Monday against the Wilson Teachers.

DePasquale Is Named C. U. Boxing Captain

Johnny DePasquale, crack bantamweight of Catholic University's boxing team, yesterday was appointed by Coach Eddie Lafond to captain the Cardinal mittmen for the season of 1932. This is DePasquale's last year at the Brookland institution, which lists him among the best boxers in its history.

DePasquale, who scored a decision victory over Bat Battalino, world's featherweight champion, when both were "kids" in amateur circles in Hartford, Conn., went through the 1931 season without defeat, winning all of his bouts on knockouts. He not only is a smart and skillful boxer, but in addition packs a real wallop in his right hand.

Academically, DePasquale is as highly rated as in the ring sport. His classroom average for the past three years is .92.

The Oakton High School boys' basket ball team Saturday won the championship of the high schools of the Northern Virginia District of the State Association. Two games were played in Fredericksburg. Oakton defeated Chancellor High School, of Spottsylvania County, 34-27, and Syringa High School, of Caroline County, 42-32. The Oakton team, composed of Mayo Stuntz, manager; Stanley Dove, of Fairfax; Alton Moreland, of Vienna; Buddie Thompson, of Vienna, and Bernard Speer, will go to Williamsburg, Va., to compete with 20 teams for the State championship.

TWO GAMES OPEN SCHOLASTIC COURT SEASON HERE TODAY

Business and Western in Contests

Stenogs to Entertain Emerson in Debut for Season.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase Quintet to Oppose Red and White.

THE season's scholastic basket ball schedule opens today when Business High and Emerson come together in Business' low-ceilinged gymnasium at 3:45 o'clock. The game features two squads which are not expected to prove vital factors in either the high school or prep school ranks.

Western also goes into action today for the first time, meeting Bethesda-Chevy Chase High, at Chevy Chase.

These two games will be followed, during the remainder of the week, by four more tussles made up of high school material. Western exhibits its team to local eyes for the first time tomorrow afternoon, when Wilson Teachers will be met. Eastern, joint holder of the high school championship with Central, opens its local season Thursday against St. John's, at Eastern. Central plays in Annapolis the same night, against St. John's freshmen. Business goes over to Washington-Lee High Friday for the sixth scholastic game of the week.

New Material To Show.

Business and Emerson will swing into action today, with each team bristling with new material. Emerson lost Cody Shapiro, Dick Kelso and Charlie Millar through graduation, while Business has been hit even harder through the going of Bobby Lucas and Bill Duryee.

Coach Woodworth will use the entire Business squad today, and probably dispose of Emerson without particular difficulty. Certain to see service for Business are Sherman and Essenstadt, in whose sharpshooting fingers the bulk of Business' hopes for the year rest. Alton Rabbit, forward, is the lone Emerson veteran in uniform. The remainder of the team will be Whelan and McHugh, forwards; Roadley, center; Cornell, Campbell, Hardy and Congleton, guards.

CHRIST CHURCH WINS.

The Christ Church 145-pound tossers opened their season with a 31-24 victory over the Knights of Columbus tossers on their home court last night. Aument, center, of the Churchmen, found the net for field goals to lead the teams in scoring. Phil Roache, with four goals, and Artie Nock and "Lubber" Hayes, with a trio each, were best for the little Caseys.

VIRGINIA FIVE HARD AT WORK

Two Practice Games Listed; Season Will Open January 6.

Special to The Washington Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Dec. 7.—Virginia's basket ball team plans to have plenty of practice before the beginning of the regular season, with home games against William and Mary and the Navy during the first week in January. The Cavalier quint started playing last Friday when it defeated the Shawnee Club, of Lynchburg, by a 32-to-20 score.

Because examinations start on December 9, they won't be able to play as much as they'd like to, but a game has been arranged for Tuesday night with the strong Staunton Collegians and another for December 19 with the Richmond Athletic Club.

Three regulars of last season sat on the bench during the game with the Lynchburg Shawnees. Robert Manley, former captain, hurt his leg in practice and was unable to play. Harry Steinberg, veteran guard, has gotten out of the hospital, but will probably be unable to play all season.

Thomas, Grid Leader, not Yet Out.

Bill Thomas, football captain, who has played guard with the quint for two seasons, has not yet reported for practice on the court. Gus Tebell, basket ball coach, had to call on Syd Young, regular forward last year, and Frank Sippley, who is on the squad for the first time, to fill in the guard positions for the first contest.

Capt. Lem Mayo and Jim Delafield, both veterans of two court campaigns, were starting forwards and are likely to continue in those positions unless Young comes back from the other end of the court. Carrington Harrison and Reggie Hudson, both lettermen, alternated at center.

In the opener the Cavalier quint showed surprising form. With the starting combination in action the Meanwell system was working at high speed and an 18-point lead was run up on the Lynchburg five when Coach Tebell began to put in his substitutes.

Christmas recess is going to be cut short by members of the basket ball squad. Plans are being made for several games away from home, but if these can not be arranged there will be other contests in the Memorial Gymnasium before William and Mary arrives for the first regular game on Wednesday, January 6.

DOUBLE-HEADER WANTETD.

Mt. St. Mary's Will Open Season on Saturday.

Special to The Washington Post.

EMMITSBURG, Md., Dec. 7.—The Mount St. Mary's College basket ball schedule was announced today by Graduate Manager J. Earl Bender, the card containing a list of 19 games, 9 to be played on the home court and 10 on foreign floors.

GETTING ALONG NICELY.

Football relations between Iowa State and the University of Missouri have been more frequent and continuous than between any other two schools in the Big Six.

COURT HOPES ROSY AT V. M. I.

Six Lettermen, Promising Newcomers Out for Team.

Special to The Washington Post.

LEXINGTON, Va., Dec. 7.—After a week of practice, from which football men were excused, Coach Bill Raftery can take stock of V. M. I.'s basket ball material for the coming season. Six lettermen and several promising sophomores are included in the squad of 25 that faces a 13-game schedule. In spite of the fact that only strong teams appear on the card, the Cadets are looking forward to a better than average season.

The monogram forwards are Capt. Bob Brown, V. M. I.'s high scorer for two seasons, and Paul Edmunds, who has a year of varsity experience behind him. Morgenhagen, the Buffalo giant, called variously Si, Scobey and Coach, is back at center. The veteran guards are Ranny Gregory and Tom Grainger, both ends on the grid team, and Braxton Cutchin, captain of the ball club. Gregory played a magnificent defensive game last season, and Grainger put life and speed in the floor game.

Stumpy Travers, fresh from stirring deeds in football, is available for varsity service at forward or guard for the first time since captaining the freshman team two years ago. Leading players up from last year's freshman five are Irvin Smith and Jim Nimmo, forwards; Tucker Watkins, center of guard, and Van Holmes, guard. All four were members of the varsity football squad.

Other players showing up well in preliminary workouts are Flash Taylor, Ed Rawson and Jim Brugh, of last year's reserves, and Gill Minor, up from the freshman team of last year.

The schedule:

January 9, St. John's (Annapolis), here; 13, Virginia, here; 16, Maryland, here; 26, Maryland, at College Park; 27, Navy, at Annapolis.

February 1, N. C. State, here; 5, Duke, here; 10, V. P. I., here; 13, William and Mary, here; 17, Virginia, at Charlottesville; 19, Duke, at Durham; 20, N. C. State, at Raleigh; 23, V. P. I., at Blacksburg.

Miller Allows Middies Rest Following Victory

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Back home boasting their first major victory of the season, the Navy football players were given a rest today, before starting preparation for their battle with the Army in New York on Saturday. The Middies came out of their 6-0 victory over Penn in good shape, with only Bullet Lou Kirn, ace halfback nursing bruises to bear witness to his having carried the brunt of the Tar offense against the Quakers. Kirn was pretty well battered, but the sailor trainers said he would be fully recovered in a couple of days.

Head Coach Rip Miller put the reserves through a hard scrimmage session with Army plays today, in order to throw them against the varsity tomorrow when real work for the cadets is started.

With his team showing daily improvement since he took over the reins at the Academy at the start of the season, Miller said he would stress aerial work on both offense and defense throughout the week's work.

The Middy mentor said his boys would not be worked to death for their traditional clash with the Soldiers, but would spend the greater amount of their time in dummy scrimmage to perfect timing and blocking.

GREAT DEFENSIVE RECORD.

Out of ten games played, seven opposing teams were held scoreless by Wallace Wade's first Duke eleven. The three teams scoring on Duke were Tennessee, South Carolina and N. C. State.

DIXIE MAKES 1932 GRID PLANS

Tech Among Teams Passing Up Intersectional Games.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—With the current gridiron season nearing its end, the college schedule makers are busy mapping out the football program for 1932. As usual, the intersectional games are much in evidence, although several teams plan a strictly Southern schedule.

Georgia Tech, which has played Carnegie Tech and Pennsylvania for the past two years, expects to have a complete Southern Conference lineup of about ten games. However, the Engineers have a postseason intersectional charity game with California to be played probably in Berkeley next December.

Alabama Plays G. W. Here.

Kentucky plans a game with the Army at West Point with the date to be settled later. North Carolina State will oppose Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh October 22.

Alabama is to play George Washington University at Washington October 8. It also is understood that Alabama may play both Georgia Tech and Georgia again next season if dates can be arranged.

Kentucky is among those teams expected to be on Georgia Tech's schedule and the Wildcats have been mentioned a probable opponent of Tulane next year. The Greenies will have their usual games with Georgia, Georgia Tech, Vanderbilt and Auburn.

Duke has signed a two-year contract with Auburn, with the first game to be played somewhere in Alabama on October 8, 1932. North Carolina and Tennessee also have agreed on a two-year contract, with next year's game set for Knoxville. The Volunteers will play Alabama, Vanderbilt, Kentucky and Duke among the conference elevens.

Coast Team Coming to Florida.

Florida will have Georgia Tech as its homecoming opponent at Gainesville November 17. The Gators, who played U. C. L. A. at Los Angeles this year, will entertain the Californians at Gainesville in December, 1932. Florida retains most of its Southern Conference foes of this season for another year.

Another new game for next year finds Maryland meeting Duke. Central of Kentucky is to meet Boston College and also is considering another Eastern game with Brown, Pittsburgh or Villa Nova.

Loyola is to play Baylor in New Orleans October 7 and Rice Institute at Houston October 25.

V. P. I. Five in Drill Under New Coach

Blacksburg, Va., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—George Proctor, new basket ball coach at V. P. I., reported heer today and at once started the squad off on serious work.

After a brief talk to candidates, the coach directed them through a spirited workout on fundamentals. Ten players, who have been at work for the last month, reported to the coach today and others are expected to join the squad this week.

Letter men reporting included Capt. Yaggi, Bosley, Hall and Wolfe, Palmer, Tibbs and Belote. Seamon, veteran center, is expected to start practice in a few days. Others out today were Caulkins and Wiseman, from last year's freshman team, and Schreiberg, varsity reserve last season.

Capital May Have 2 Teams In Indoor Tennis League

WASHINGTON again has entered a tennis team in the Baltimore Winter Indoor League, which will commence operations January 2 on the eight courts at the Fifth Regiment Armory, in Baltimore. Another District of Columbia team is being formed now, with Owen Howenstein, Joe Rutley, Fred Doyle and Pat Walker as a nucleus, and has applied for a franchise.

The Washington entrant will comprise fundamentally the same players who made up the first team to enter the Baltimore net circuit four years ago. It will be headed by Dooly Mitchell, ranking No. 1 player in the city. Others on the squad are Anthony Latona, Frank Shore, Bill Buchanan, Colin Stam and Clyde Yeomans. Ed Yeomans, District champion, is expected to play in the first match while home from college. Joe Olhausen, Philadelphia net ace, now living heer, is expected to play.

The league was to have opened next Saturday with Washington scheduled to play Sunday, but several civic organizations have received permission to use the giant armory.

Washington is expected to send several of its younger players to the national junior and boys championship, which will be held at the armory. Gilbert Hunt, District of Columbia boys champion and generally acknowledged to be the best young prospect ever developed here, was especially invited by the committee in charge last night. Happy Jacob is another youth who is expected to see service. Frank Shore, present holder of the junior indoor doubles championship, with Kendall Cram, of Knoxville, is over age. The limit for juniors is 18; for boys, 16.

Including the second Washington team, which probably will be known as the Dumbartons, the indoor league this season will comprise seven teams. They are, besides the two Washington teams, made up entirely of Baltimore players. The teams are Mount Washington, Maryland Casualty, Racquet Club, Interpark, and American Legion.

Eddie Jacobs, ranking No. 1 player in this section of the country, will captain the Racquet Club Team. Other Baltimoreans in action will be Alex Keiles, Maryland indoor champion; Elmer Rudy, Morton Shapiro, Page Andrews, Eric Jacobson, and Ralph Robinson.

Both Washington teams are open to new players. Places still are vacant on the Dumbarton Team and may be had on the Washington Team itself by challenging and defeating one of the players already on the teams.

Catholic, American Fives In First Games This Week

COLLEGIATE basket ball noses into the sports spotlight hereaboutsthisweek, with American University and Catholic University each booked for two games. American wil play both of its games at home, while Catholic will visit New York.

The Eagles will open their campaign tomorrow night in the Massachusetts Avenue Heights Gymnasium, meeting Maryland State Normal, perennial early season foe for local colleges. This contest, which the Eagles figure to win, begins at 8 o'clock. On Friday night Coach Young's quintet will engage Hampden-Sidney from Virginia, a team likely to extend the Eagles to the limit.

Catholic, minus several players who are still engaged with football, will encounter probably the bets team on its schedule in its very first game, the opponent being St. John's of Brooklyn, scheduled Friday night. St. John's appeared here twice last year in winning performances. On Saturday night the Cardinals will meet City College of New York, another powerful quintet, coached by Nat Holman, one of the outstanding basketers of all time.

Georgetown and George Washington are slated to begin court activities next week, the former playing Mount St. Marys Tuesday night in Tech High Gym and the latter opposing Shenandoah Wednesday night in the G. W. Gym at 2010 H street northwest.

Maryland's season opens on December 30, when the Terrapins, champions of the Southern Conference, tackle Wisconsin, at Madison, Wis. The Terrapins wil make the long journey just for one game.

Gustafson Not Coming Back as V. P. I. Coach

Blacksburg, Va., Dec. 7 (A.P.).—C. P. Miles, director of athletics at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, today denied that Andy Gustafson, former Tech football coach was again being considered for the post.

Mr. Miles said that Mr. Gustafson was highly regarded at V. P. I. and that his work while there was satisfactory but that he was now under a three year contract at Pittsburgh. Gustafson went to Pitt from V. P. I. in 1929 when the Tech authorities released him from his contract at the Blacksburg school to return to his alma mater.

Regarding Gustafson's visit to Blacksburg Mr. Miles stated that it was purely a social call. He also stated that Zonar A. Wissinger, line coach with Gustafson in 1926, was only visiting friends in Blacksburg and was not in connection with a coaching position.

Mr. Miles gave out his statement following a newspaper story to the effect that Mr. Gustafson was in Blacksburg and that this had led to the belief that he might be named successor to Coach Neal.

Catholic U. to Honor Cross Country Runners

Three cross-country representatives of Catholic University are to be awarded the school's 1931 athletic merit insignia. Of the varsity, Vincent McDonald and Manager Ben Morgan are to receive letters. A numeral will be presented Octavus Averhoff, freshman star.

Intra-squad track competition entered its second lap yesterday as Octavus Averhoff stepped away from the field in the 40-yard handicap mile event. Negotiating the distance in 4 minutes and 52 seconds, Averhoff was closely followed by George Garafalo, who, running from scratch, made the course in 4 minutes and 52 seconds. McDonald, McGuigan, O'Loughlin, DeMatt, D'Onoforio, Connor, Farris and Restino followed in that order.

A half mile run, the third feature of the intra-squad competition, is to be offered at Brookland Sunday.

Point scorers in the events to date follow: Averhoff, 55; McDonald, 45; McGuigan, 35; O'Loughlin, 30; Garafalo, 25; DeMatt, 15; Bruder, 5; D'Onoforio, 5; Connolly, 5.

BASKET BALL HOPES DIM AT DUKE

One Regular, 2 Subs Only Left-Overs of 1930 Team.

Special to The Washington Post.

DURHAM, N. C., Dec. 7.—Coach Eddie Cameron will have to begin at the bottom in molding a Duke basket ball team for the coming season to defend the North Carolina Big Five title that Blue Devil quints have won for the past two years. Only one regular from the 1931 squad is returning. Two subs from last year's team will be back, but the other 19 candidates for this season's court squad are men with no varsity experience.

"We have never had such a lack of experienced material," Coach Cameron said. "We'll have to depend on speed if we get anywhere for we have no tall men. Prospects are very gloomy."

Johnny Shaw, guard, is the lone regular from last year who is back. George Rogers, star forward, and Joe Croson, high scoring center, have finished their three years. Don Robertshaw, guard, and Bert Hill, center substitute, were knocked from the list by scholastic regulations. Ted Capelli, forward, and Nelson Colley, guard, did not return to school.

Former United States Senator Arthur Brown, of Salt Lake City, Utah, was shot and seriously wounded at his room at the Raleigh Hotel by a demented woman.

Admiral Dewey called at the White House to talk over with the President the provisions of the Navy personnel bill. The admiral is in favor of having younger men in charge of the ships of the American Navy.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THE GARBLE SISTERS PICK AN ALL-AMERICAN.

"WHADDAYA say if we pick out one of them All-American football teams?"

"I ain't seen many football games."

"Neither have I, but that don't make no difference. Think of a name—any name at all."

"Man o' War."

"It's gotta be the name of a man, not a horse. They don't put horses on all-American football teams."

"They might as well. You want the name of a man, eh? All right—Newton Baker."

"Okay. We'll start off with Newton Baker. What team was he on?".

"He was at right end for Mukden."

"Now, I'll name a left end. Who was that great left end on Notre Dame this year?"

"Raskob."

"That's the one. We'll put him at left end on our All-American. Now, how about a couple of guards?"

"How about Clarence Munn for one?"

"Where did Munn play?"

"Chinchow, I think."

"All right, Munn for right guard and that Southern California star at left guard. You know who I mean."

"Tom Mooney?"

"Correct. Now you name a couple of good tackles."

"I don't know any good tackles."

"In picking 'em for an All-American you don't have to. How about Ira Hardy, jr., that great left tackle for Tsitsihar, I think it was?

* * * *

"ALL right, and who was that right tackle that went so good for Yale all season?"

"Laval, wasn't it?"

"That's the one. You've got a great memory for names. Now we need a good quarter back. Wasn't this feller Marchmont Cronkhite a quarter back?"

"You mean Marchmont Morton. He played on Dartmouth or maybe it was Tulane. But this boy Albie Wood, of Princeton, was pretty good, too. I saw him make those touchdowns in the game with Nanking. That was the game that Hitler, Bruening and Stimson tried to gang him."

"Well, we'll put Albie Wood at quarter. Now for the back field. Who was the best half back of the year?"

"There was Ira Pinckert, jr., of Minnesota, who was a sensation in the game with Simeon Fess."

"Pinckert's first name wasn't Ira. It was Joe. And he played on the Columbia eleven with Lassiter, Barres and Hunk Anderson. But we'll put him at right half back. How about putting that Harvard star at left half back?"

"You mean Pepper Martin or Tuan Chi-jui?"

"I mean Gerardo Machado."

"All right. Put him on. Now all we need is a full back. Who was that full back that did such great work for Holy Cross in the games with Manchuria, New York Central, Sino-China and Moscow?"

"You mean Millikan, the Atom Smasher."

"That's the baby."

THE UNKINDEST CUT.

ELMER TWITCHELL says he has a friend who quit one of the so-called blue chip corporations in a huff last week, explaining it this way: "I stood for a lot from that corporation, but it was the last straw when they offered me a chance as an employe to buy some of the stock a few points below the market."

All that was needed in San Francisco to complete the picture was to have Mayor Walker throw Gov. Rolph a baseball, hand somebody a scroll and give all San Francisco the freedom of their city.

STOCK PRICES DROP SLIGHTLY AT CLOSE

Market Waits on Events This Week; Day's Sales 1,458,565 Shares.

New York, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—A week crowned with events that will have a bearing on ultimate answers to economic and financial problems, both domestic and foreign, began today with stocks satisfied to follow a policy of watchful waiting.

Shares rallied spryly in the morning after an irregular start, but speculative circles were unwilling to venture too far on the side of optimism and a dull decline occurred during afternoon, making final prices irregularly lower. The range for the day, however, was small and the turnover totaled only 1,458,565 shares.

The Interstate Commerce Commission's announcement regarding freight rates came unexpectedly after the close. Wall street will be as interested in its possible effect on the Chicago labor meeting as in its modification of the pooling plan to which the roads had objected unless advances made thereunder were considered as loans rather than gifts. Opinion in financial circles is that relief for the carriers must be afforded quickly if further difficulties are to be averted, and at first glance it appeared the new statement had hastened that end.

Hoover's Message Awaited.

The financial community is eagerly awaiting President Hoover's message to Congress, but it will also follow closely the National Legislature's session in the next few months. Changes in the Federal Reserve act, expansion of credit facilities, revisions in the antitrust laws, international debt questions and problems of Government finance are among the matters which appear certain to become before the Houses; the decisions made will be far-reaching.

Terms of the Treasury's mid-December financing were favorably received. Yields are larger than on the September offerings, while the decision in favor of short term securities was taken to mean that the Government expected more favorable conditions for placing a longer term offering at a later date. Meanwhile, of course, the coupon rate is being kept down, which saves interest charges.

A few stocks displayed some heaviness. One was Standard Oil of New Jersey, whose net loss of more than a point appeared to indicate tax selling. Another was New York Central, off 1½ net, the sag there representing uncertainty over this week's dividend action. A week or so ago Wall street almost unanimously agreed the payment would be omitted; now, however, there is a belief that something, perhaps half of the present rate, will be declared.

Steel Output Low.

U. S. Steel was never very vigorous, for the industry is currently beset by irregularity both in operations and prices. The present production ratio is under that of a week ago, approximating the depression low. Automobile demands have so far been light.

American Telephone ran up nearly 2 points in response to a favorable earnings estimate, but closed with a fractional loss. There were also small declines in American Can, Consolidated Gas, Woolworth and Westinghouse. National Biscuit, General Electric, Chrysler, Case and Radio firmed.

Sterling exchange was weak, making a new low, but the reichsmark steadied and the French franc held firm. Increased offerings from Argentina and forecasts of snow in the Northwest eased wheat which closed unchanged to nearly a cent lower. Corn was unchanged to ⅜ off, while cotton dipped 2 to 4 points.

Chilean Nitrate Report On Dissolution Is Filed

Santiago, Chile, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The government commission considering a recommendation for dissolution of the $300,000,000 Cosach Nitrate combination has submitted a new report, the contents of which will not be made public for several days.

It was reported that dissolution is recommended this time only if private nitrate companies refuse to accept certain reforms suggested as a means of reviving prosperity in the industry.

BOND MARKET SAGS TO NEW LOW LEVELS

General Tone Now Improved Despite Losses; Several Gains Recorded.

New York, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Another erratic bond market, which at times indicated it was trying to climb out of the low-price slough, today knocked several utilities and rails down to new bottom records for the year.

As in some other sessions, however, the cold figures did not tell the whole story. United States Government issues were well bought at advances, German loans improved throughout, and domestic obligations showed a firm tone in many instances.

The thinness of the market was shown by the fact that the sales totaled only $10,208,000, the lightest full day's trading since November 23. Some dealers were inclined to believe that the slowdown in trading presaged a finish to the recent liquidation.

With the exception of the German government 7s, most of the loans of that country were up from fractions to 5¼ points. French and Italian issues were firm, but British 5½s were down 1¼ points. Argentines recovered some of their recent losses, and Japanese loans held their own.

In the face of the somewhat misleading averages, rail bonds, such as Atchison, Central Pacific, Burlington, Northwestern, Rock Island; Colorado & Southern, Erie, Great Northern, Illinois Central, Missouri Pacific, Nickel Plate and a number of others were brought at an advance. Boston & Maine 4¾s, 1961, gained 7 points. At the same time, Baltimore & Ohios, Canadian Nationals and others were weak. Missouri, Kansas & Texas 4½s lost 14 points.

TALLEY DAY'S DEATH FIGHT TOLD AT TRIAL

Accused Slayer Holds Eyes on Floor as Witnesses Tell of Shooting.

"Snails," "Gumps," "Bull Dog" and "Jimmy," picturesque sobriquets of frequenters of a speakeasy formerly located at 1523 M street northwest, where Talley Day, small-time racketeer, was shot to death May 17, were names that paraded through the trial of Elmer J. Sweeney yesterday when he was arraigned on an indictment charging him with first degree murder.

Sweeney, a taciturn, gloomy individual, took no part whatever in the day-long trial. He sat between his attorneys, Bert Emerson and Harold Stephenson, and kept his eyes on the floor. Not once did he take an appreciative interest in the trial that may cost him his life.

With dozens of prospective jurors affirming their inability to vote a man guilty and thereby possibly send him to the electric chair, the process of picking the panel of twelve took up the entire morning session. Defense attorneys early exhibited an unwillingness to accept women on the jury, and that caused a shortage which made it necessary to swear into criminal service a number of civil jurors.

Questioned by Assistant United States Attorney James Kirkland, Government witnesses pictured scenes in the speakeasy leading up to the shooting of Day. A thrown "gin buck" that landed on the face of a person known only as "Gumps" started off the day, and a second "gin buck" that "Gumps" tossed onto Day ended it, because the latter pulled a pistol and began firing.

Witnesses said that as soon as the shooting began they fled, leaving Sweeney and Day to shoot it out. Though the two were only separated by a narrow bar, only one shot in a fusillade took effect and that one struck Day over the eye. He died a few hours later in Emergency Hospital. The Government's case will be concluded today and the defense is expected to be almost through by the close of today's session.

Skyviews of Washington—No. 38

Fairchild Aerial Surveys, Inc.

New Hampshire avenue may be seen running at an angle across the foreground, and in the body of the picture are the nine buildings comprising the development.

The enterprise was launched as the commercial realization of a Federal philanthropy, suggested by President Hoover while Secretary of Commerce. The unfulfilled plan called for apartments that could be sold to Federal employes at $12.50 a room per month after a cash payment of $250 a room.

The project was one of the first contemplating the housing of an entire community in cooperative apartment buildings. It was originally undertaken by J. B. Shapiro and Edmund J. Flynn.

ITALY IS ADVANCING IN BUILDING OF SHIPS

Figures for First 9 Months of Year Show Nation Far Up the Ladder.

Rome (U.P.).—With orders flowing in from every part of the globe, Italy is fast assuming a prominent position among the leading shipbuilding nations of the world.

Figures for the first nine months of 1931 reveal that Italy's shipyards are the fourth busiest in the world, while in the construction of marine engines and machinery she occupies second position.

Italy, under the impulse of fascism, has been striving to make the Italian mercantile banner occupy a place among the chief shipping nations of the world. Italian shipyards for the last few years have been humming with activity, dividing their building between domestic and foreign orders.

Low Building Costs.

Low building costs, made possible through government premiums and cheap labor, have made it possible for Italian yards to underbid many other longer established shipbuilding countries, and especially England. Italian yards recently have executed, or are finishing, important orders from the United States, Argentina, Turkey, Greece and Soviet Russia.

According to reliable figures, Italian yards during the first nine months of this year had under construction nearly 160,000 tons of shipping, representing twenty ships. This figure [illegible] construction for the same period.

France Feels Depression.

While France's yards are feeling the effects of the world trade depression, Italy's are constantly growing stronger and increasing their yearly output.

Naturally, first place in mercantile construction is maintained by England with 417,000 tons, or 88 ships, in course of construction during the last nine months. The United States comes second with 25 ships, representing 261,000 tons, while France ranks third with 169,000.

Italy's position in the construction of marine machinery is enviable for a nation which has only recently developed her shipbuilding industry. During the last nine months Italy has furnished fifteen powerful marine engines capable of developing more than 321,000 horsepower, which is nearly one-half the total horsepower built during this period. England built many more machines, but her total horsepower is only slightly more than 100,000 more than Italy's.

ULTRA SHORT WAVES OF HELP TO ISLANDS

Hawaiian System Established After Many Problems Are Overcome.

New York (A.P.).—Ultra short waves have been put to work from a practical standpoint in the Hawaiian Islands.

Announcement has been made here that an interisland radio telephone system has been established on a 5-meter band, marking the first time wave lengths under 10 meters had been given a commercial status.

Experiments on the ultra waves have been going on all over the world in an effort to tap a new reservoir of wave channels, and utilize ether territory hitherto believed to be unworkable. These waves have numerous advantages, in that static and other types of interference are at a minimum, and they are believed to have a definite cut-off point or service area limit.

Numerous problems had to be overcome before the radio service could be established, resulting in the design of a "long line frequency control," a new system of maintaining the wave length of the transmitter constant. It is an electrical circuit without tubes or moving parts and gets its name from the fact that it comprises lines having length many times that of the wave on which the transmitter operates.

The Hawaiian 5-meter system connects the Island of Hawaii, Kauai, Oahu and Maui, and was established through the cooperation of RCA engineers, who have done much research on the ultra waves, and the Mutual Telephone Co.

Death Takes 2 Officials Of Bank Within Day

Louisville, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—Henry D. Ormsby, 70, vice president of the First National Bank of Louisville, died suddenly of a heart attack at his home here today, less than twenty hours after the death of John M. Monohan, president of the institution. Mr. Ormsby had called at a hospital yesterday morning to inquire about Mr. Monahan's condition.

Mr. Ormsby was a native of Louisville.

SPANISH WAR MEN FORM LAST CLUB

Kansas City, Mo. (U.P.).—Kansas City has a Last Man's Club, formed some time before the Minnesota organization became prominent.

Made up originally of fifty-odd men who marched away to the Spanish-American War, the club had dwindled, at its last meeting a few days ago, to eight men.

Like similar organizations, the club possesses a treasured bottle, brandy, in this case, which is to be kept inviolate until only two of the club are left.

Then these two "shall drink as much as is discreet." The residue of the quart, if any, will go to the last survivor, who will drink a toast to his departed comrades.

Charles M. Howell, candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States senator, entertained the club at its most recent meeting. To the others he became once more Capt. Howell.

There are more than eight of the group, which once was the Fifth Missouri Infantry, alive. Several were unable to return for the meeting. One of those absent was Brig. Gen. George D. Moore, of the United States Army.

TOMB OF JOFFRE IS NEARLY READY

Victor of Marne Will Repose in Garden of Home Where He Ended His Days.

Paris (U.P.).—The tomb in which the remains of Marshal Joffre, the victor of the Marne, will finally repose in the garden of his home at Louveciennes, near here, will be completed in a few weeks.

Since his death last December, his body has been in the chapel of the Invalides, not far from the tomb of Napoleon. In the crypt near Napoleon's tomb rest the remains of Foch and other marshals of France. Joffre chose not to be placed in the Invalides, but to be taken to his beloved garden among the woods overlooking the valley of the Seine, there to repose forever.

Construction of the tomb has been carried out under the supervision of Mme. Joffre, the soldier's widow.

As soon as the last stone of the mausoleum has been put in place, arrangements will be made to transfer the body, in strictest simplicity, from the Invalides to the countryside near the historic Chateau of Versailles. By request of the widow, only four or five close relatives, or intimate friends of the family, will be present.

A short religious ceremony will be performed. Over the grave is a stone cupola, supported by five white pillars. Around the mausoleum is a tiny circular hedge, with an opening for the pathway that leads up to the house, where Mme. Joffre lives. In her will, Mme. Joffre has requested to be buried beside her famous husband.

2 Bankers Accept Chest Drive Posts

Fleming and Thom to Act as Vice Chairmen in Campaign.

Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, and Corcoran Thom, president of the American Security & Trust Co., have accepted the invitation of Campaign Chairman Edward F. Colladay to act as vice chairmen of the Community Chest campaign committee for 1932, Chairman Colladay announced yesterday.

Both Mr Fleming and Mr Thom have been identified with the work of the Chest since it was first formed in 1928 for the 1929 campaign. Mr Fleming has been chairman of the special gifts unit, vice president and later treasurer of the Chest, while Mr. Thom filled the arduous task of chairman of the budget committee in 1931.

Since being virtually drafted for the position of campaign chairman, Mr. Colladay has been extremely active in the work of the Chest and is building up an organization with which he hopes to go beyond the total goal of $2,601,000 now tentatively set for the 1932 campaign. He pointed out yesterday that relief needs are increasing almost every day and warned that while the goal of the Chest had been set at $2,601,000, that this would be a minimum goal with the possibility of relief needs forcing an increase in this amount. The Government departments are conducting a campaign with $1,000,000 of this total as their goal, leaving $1,601,000 or more for the other citizens of Washington to raise.

Answer to Wife's Suit Is Filed by McLean

Edward B. McLean, publisher of The Washington Post, yesterday filed a formal answer to the suit of his wife, Mrs. Evalyn Lucille Walsh McLean, to have him ousted as a co-trustee of the estate of his father, John R. McLean.

Mr. McLean denied that his conduct had been prejudicial to the best interests of The Post. To the contrary, he said, he had always paid strict attention to the affairs of The Post, and had cooperated in The Post's affairs by encouraging advertisers through his personal patronage. The answer to Mrs. McLean's suit says that Mr. McLean has not refused to cooperate with the other co-trustee, the American Security & Trust Co., or that his resignation as a co-trustee has ever been demanded by the trust company.

Nebraska Beavers Move.

Bridgeport, Neb. (U.P.).—The beaver, one of the common fur-bearing animals of Nebraska, is disappearing from Pumpkin Seed Creek here. Low level of the water this summer caused the animals to desert their dams and lodges.
